BOY MURDER LAID TO MAN IN JAIL

From the tragic, tearful story of a nine-year-old Cambridge boy—a neighbor of the slain Chester Harris—police today announced they had woven a net of circumstantial evidence about a man already in custody.

For all that the prisoner has maintained his innocence. Authorities declared, however, it begins to look more and more as though this man might have been Chester Harris' slayer.

The nerve-wracked child who told District Attorney Warren L. Bishop and other investigators of his experience was taken to the spot in Allston where the murdered boy's grave was uncovered.

"This is where the man wanted me to come," he sobbed. "But I wouldn't. He took me over there."

And the boy pointed across to a hut on the Cambridge side of the Charles river, 75 feet off Pleasant street.

Buried with the body of Chester Harris were five large safety pins, all of the same type, one bearing a metal tag with the number "73." A photograph of this pin is on Page 3.

Laundries have used this type of pin to identify lots of clothing during washing. No. 73 must be missing from some laundry.

Identification of the slayer of Chester Harris might be made if the laundry missing this numbered pin notified police.

AUTO STRIKE 'BREAK' HINT; STOCKS RISE

BULLETIN

New York, Jan. 29 (INS)—Strong intimation by Governor Frank Murphy of Michigan that a "break" in the auto strike was imminent acted as a hypodermic on the stock market today.

Motors and steels firmed and the gains ranging from $1 to $2 a share extended quickly to other groups, including auto accessories and oils.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 29 An important development in the auto strike situation is due momentarily, Governor Frank Murphy declared today.

Aroused after a delegation of non-union General Motors workers threatened a "sit-down" demonstration in his executive offices, Governor Murphy said:

"I am going to start an investigation to determine whether General Motors is behind a sinister, vicious, skillful attempt to force me to use violence in this strike."

His statement came after 25 anti-strike workers visited him and demanded he yield to demands two General plants in Flint be evacuated of sit-down strikers.

Murphy told the group, workers of the Chevrolet Gear & Axle Co. in Detroit, that he expected a "break" in the strike situation later in the day, in Washington.

THOUSANDS SICK; PERIL INCREASES

Flood News and Pictures Pages 8, 9 and 20

A SUMMARY OF HORROR

While the worst of the flood was flowing sluggishly out of the Ohio River valley, the vast and fertile Mississippi valley is only beginning to stagger under its impact.

Crest waters of the nation's most disastrous flood pound at a 60-foot sea wall guarding Cairo, Ill., as 4,000 struggle to save city and thousands flee.

A pick and shovel army of 100,000 men battles to fortify levees. These ramparts are the big valley's only hope.

Thousands of flood refugees stricken by influenza as epidemic perils lives. Many expectant mothers await "flood babies."

Meanwhile, lists of homeless swell totals to 1,035,000; there are 330 known dead, with fatalities estimated at in excess of 400; damage still stands at $400,000,000.

President Roosevelt will send four high government officials to Memphis to begin a clean-up and sanitation drive northward to the Ohio River.

Alan Frazer describes the greater peril which now confronts Louisville and the rest of "the valley of havoc."

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 29— The long, black night closes in on the stricken city, compressing the whole visible world to the corner where I stand, watching the posting of the 11th Infantry's night patrol.

The guard tramps off into the black void and nothing can be heard but the hum and throb of fire engines pumping water from the buildings.

The night is a blackout. The night is a stifling hood. No man knows his neighbor. Every man keeps to the curb, avoiding the dark doorways.

Flood waters of the north, after a $400,000,000 scourge of the Ohio River valley, began an invasion into the south today.

Scores of villages and countless farms along the 200-mile stretch from Cairo, Ill., to Memphis, Tenn., swam deep in the rising tide of the Mississippi, fed at a rate of nearly 3,000,000 cubic feet per second by the falling Ohio.

The crest was still to come—now hovering just above Paducah, Ky.

Memphis, safely on the Chickasaw bluffs, hummed today as more thousands of refugees streamed into the city.

Snow, Sleet Riding Gale Up Coast To Boston

An old-fashioned New England storm with snow, sleet and winds approaching gale force is sweeping up the coast and due to last into Saturday, the weather bureau said today.

The mercury will be skirting around the freezing point—32 degrees—but is not expected to go much lower, and as a result the snow will turn to rain.

Storm warnings were posted along the coast and shipping projected for many weather. Gales of 44 miles an hour were roaring up from Cape Hatteras to hit here by nightfall, it continued.

Coldest spot in the country today was 22 below zero at Helena, Mont., the weather bureau said. Coldest in New England was 14 above at Greenville, Me.

Pope's Paralysis Now Spreading

Vatican City, Jan. 29 (INS)—Attacks of pain in Pio Pope's hands and right shoulder today confirmed fears that the paralysis which developed first in his legs is slowly spreading through the Pontiff's entire body.

These stabs of agony caused a sleepless night and this morning the Pope appeared extremely worn.

Noting that they have begun to lose their power to ease the Holy Father's suffering, Dr. Aminta Milani is reported hesitant to continue the use of opiates.

COAST LINER PUTS OUT FIRE AFTER SOS CALL

New York, Jan. 29 (AP)—The captain of the coastwise vessel Shawnee wirelessed at noon that he had extinguished a fire in the ship's No. 2 hold after a fight of several hours.

At 7 a. m. the captain had sent out a peremptory SOS call.

With 190 passengers and a cargo of fruits and vegetables, cotton and old auto tires, the Shawnee, of 6209 tons, with a crew of 174, is bound from Jacksonville and Miami to New York.

Passengers aboard the ship included several from New England. They are:

Miss Elizabeth Beltz, Southampton, Ct.

Mr. and Mrs. James Kelleher, Boston, Mass.

Raymond Hickey, Hartford, Ct.

Thomas Melia, Fall River, Mrs. G. Ketchum, Boston.

A message from the Shawnee at noon said she was making 17 knots and would arrive at her pier about 1 p. m.

An hour and 20 minutes after sounding the SOS the Shawnee ordered all ships in the vicinity the fire was under control.

Then the captain wirelessed his New York office:

"Fire in cotton now out. Proceeding to New York."

The Shawnee also radioed that it was encountering heavy weather.

The position of the ship, of 6209 tons, with a crew of 174, at the time of the SOS was about 52 miles southeast of Cape Henry.

Radio Value Shown By Rescue Craft

The United Fruit Company announced today that its steamship Peten, responding to a distress call from the steamship Shawnee, afire off Virginia, found the Shawnee "surrounded by vessels, all ready to help."

The company's announcement said: "The utility and value of radio at sea was never better manifest."

Wife Wins $17,500 In Alimony From Brighton Man

Mrs. Edna W. Adams of Wallingford road, Brighton, was awarded $17,500 alimony and granted an uncontested divorce today by Judge Frederick J. Dillon in Suffolk Probate Court.

Charging cruelty, Mrs. Adams had sued Raymond C. Adams, sales representative of a Boston paper concern.

She testified:

"On August 15, 1935, he came home intoxicated, grabbed me by my throat and threatened me with death. Another time he threatened to shoot me.

"I saw him with many other women in the street, but when I spoke to him about it his answer was there's nothing wrong in it. He was fickle-minded."

Following an attorney's conference at the bench, Judge Dillon announced the cash settlement.

4 High U. S. Officials To Start Sanitation Drive

Washington, Jan. 29 (AP)—President Roosevelt announced today four high government officials would leave for Memphis Sunday to begin a clean-up and sanitation drive from there northward to the Ohio river.

The four are Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress administrator; Major General Edwin M. Markham, chief of Army engineers; Surgeon General Thomas Parran, Jr., of the Public Health Service, and Colonel F. C. Harrington, Army engineer now attached to the WPA.

Hopkins and the others will stop at all important cities to plan a program of rehabilitation with local relief leaders.

The President said blankets and other equipment would be furnished and two kinds of federal financial assistance provided.

The first will be for persons in need of immediate financial assistance on a small scale. They will receive donations from the Red Cross.

Larger sums will be lent through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to help storekeepers who have lost their stocks.

The Federal Housing Administration also will participate with insurance of private loans for restoration of dwellings.

BOY IN TEARS GIVES HARRIS MURDER CLUE TO POLICE

WOMAN ALSO AIDS IN HUNT FOR TWIN'S SLAYER

man, gave authorities high hopes of a speedy solution to the murder, they said.

This woman, it was learned, told Wm. Newton detectives that on the evening of October 31, the day after Chester Harris disappeared, she saw a man furtively carrying a burlap-wrapped bundle in Western avenue, Allston, near the billboards.

She said she was driving past that section when she noticed the man. She said he peered up and down the street as he stood there with his bundle.

Because Chester Harris' body had been wrapped in burlap before it was buried, the utmost importance was attached to this story. The woman said she had forgotten the incident until the finding of the body on Wednesday.

This man may be asked today to view the man in Cambridge named by the nine-year-old boy, in order to determine if he resembles the man she said she saw with the burlap bundle.

LITTLE BOY'S STORY

The boy was first interviewed at District Attorney Bishop's office in the presence of Detective Sergeant Patrick F. Reddy and Chief Timothy Leahy of Cambridge. Captain John F. McCarthy, Boston homicide bureau head, and other investigators.

Then he directed them to Pleasant street and told them that he had sighted his fortune in a ramshackle hut there. The hut was made of old automobile parts and discarded lumber. The first two places that Medical Examiner William J. Brackley thought might have contained Chester Harris' body before it was buried—cold and damp.

"It happened there," the boy said. "Many times. He wanted me to go over to the other side where the billboards are, but I wouldn't. I was too scared.

"I met him first on the Western avenue bridge, about there."

(And the boy indicated a spot about 300 yards from where the girl's body was found at Western avenue and Soldiers Field road.)

THREATS TO KILL

"He gave me some money and told me meet him back of the billboards. I said no. Then he threatened to kill me. He threatened to kill me afterwards, too, if I told anybody."

Police asked the boy if he had really ever been back of the billboards. He answered:

"Sure. I've been there about 10 times. We used to pick up junk and things. Once I found a gold ring there. It was marked 'W. C.'"

Just to test the truth of the story, one officer asked:

"Can you write that? 'W. C.'?"

"Course," teh boy said. Borrowing a pencil and paper he did write it.

NEAR MURDER DATE

The last day he met the man, the boy said, was on October 31 at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Chester Harris, police believe, was killed between 4 and 6 p. m. on Oct. 30.

When he concluded his story, the little witness was sobbing. He is an undersized, brown-haired and brown-eyed boy. Robert C. True, agent for the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children, said that the torture the boy underwent caused him to awake nights and scream.

"He's after me—he's chasing me again! Help!"

The boy is under treatment at a Wellesley convalescent home as a result of his ordeal.

(Because this little boy has suffered enough, the Boston Evening American is not using either his name or photographs which all photographers made at the scenes to which he took authorities.)

At the previous conference plans were also laid to "break down" an inmate of the Billerica House of Correction, who had reputedly boasted before the Hall boy's body had been found, that he "knew where Chester Harris was buried."

To further this plan, Charles Richardson, keeper of the Billerica jail, was also summoned to the conference. The district attorney told reporters what was planned but asked them to keep the plans secret for the obvious reason that the prisoner might learn of them.

Lieutenant Daniel M. O'Connell of Somerville police was also in the district attorney's office, but for what reason he declined to say.

He was the officer assigned to tracking down Harry Cahill, alleged slayer of little Peggy McCarthy who was killed in Cambridge in 1933.

Mayor John D. Lynch of Cambridge issued a statement in regard to the murder and relating to the special session of the Cambridge City Council called for tonight to consider offering a $1000 reward for the arrest of the Harris boy's slayer. The mayor said:

"The finding of the body has brought to light a most heinous crime, one which shocks the entire nation.

"Our sympathies go out to the grief-stricken parents and family. But the brutality of the crime should be the motive of stirring our efforts to apprehend the killer immediately.

"He must be brought to justice. The city of Cambridge will do everything possible to co-operate with the Boston police department to accomplish this.

"No expense must be spared to learn the identity of the killer and bring him to justice."

Two other clues of major importance are in the hands of investigating officials today.

SEE BLANK WALL

One of them, a mystery telephone, call by a girl to Cambridge police four days after the boy disappeared, was accounted of unusual importance, but officials admitted they were up against a blank wall in handling it at present.

The call, in which the girl refused to identify herself, came as officers were searching the area on each side of the Charles river between Cottage Farm and Larz Anderson bridges in a hunt for the boy.

"Chester Harris is down behind the billboards at the corner of Soldiers Field road and Western avenue" the girl's voice told the desk officer at headquarters. "Send an officer down right away and you'll find him."

The stark truth of the girl's statement hit police forcibly yesterday during their probe and brought the realization that in her was the probable key to the solution of the mystery.

HUNT MYSTERY GIRL

But who is she and where is she?

These were the questions which confronted officials today.

Telephone company officials told police that under the circumstances it was practically impossible to trace such a call. The length of time which has elapsed since the call was made and the fact that it was between two local stations made any possibility of pinning it on a definite area remote, it was said.

It was revealed, however, that Cambridge police had notified the Brighton station, in whose jurisdiction the scene is, and officers were sent there but could find no living persons there.

At the very moment the officers surveyed the scene behind the billboard, the little lad's body was probably lying near them in his shallow grave.

The other clues of major importance, in the belief of officials, are the large safety pins, to which rectangular numbered tags are attached.

Today the aid of dry cleaners is being sought as officials believe the pins are the same type used by these cleaners in keeping the clothing of various customers separated while in the process of cleaning.

TRACING PIN CLUE

Pins of this type are known in the cleansing trade as "series pins," and the metal tags attached to them are numbered in series by which garments of customers are identified.

They are numbered from 1 to 100 and so on into the thousands.

Officials believe it significant that two of the several pins found in the earth at the shallow grave were numbered in sequence, 74 and 75, indicating that they came from the same establishment.

On orders of Police Commissioner Joseph F. Timilty of Boston and Police Chief Timothy F. Leahy of Cambridge details of officers checked all laundry and cleaning establishments in both cities today.

Particular efforts will be directed toward locating establishments which may have pins missing in the 74 and 75 series.

Investigators are of the opinion that the pins were used by the slayer to draw together the burlap sacking in which the naked body of the slain child was bundled before the hasty burial.

This would indicate that the burlap was in pieces and not a bag, as was supposed, and that the pins were used in addition to the strands of rough wire used to enclose the head and feet of the victim.

It was also believed that the tracing of the pins might lead to the last point at which the child was alive and even to the slayer himself.

Publishing of photographs of the pins was also expected to bring possible identification of them or some tangible information as to their source.

Also under consideration was the possibility that the child may have picked up the pins somewhere as his parents say, he was accustomed to hoarding such articles as trinkets and playthings for his childish games.

OTHER SUSPECTS

Other suspects include a man reported to Captain John F. McCarthy of the Boston police homicide squad as stating that he had knowledge of the place where the then missing boy's body was buried, and a Cambridge man, now being held for trial on a charge of attacking an eight-year-old South Boston girl.

While officials are concentrating on these special angles of the investigation, large details of Boston and Cambridge police are continuing the routine work of the probe.

Today search continues at the scene of the boy's shallow grave with dirt and rubbish there being sifted for further clues.

The child's left arm is still missing and officers are hopeful that the systematic search will disclose the bones in the vicinity of the grave.

Arnold Harris, father of the boy, remained at the scene throughout the day, watching the officers searching.

He maintained his composure although it was apparent that he was considerably shaken by the tragedy.

Also to be questioned within the next few days are neighbors of the Harris family in Chestnut street, Cambridge, little more than a half-mile from the point where the boy's body was found on the opposite side of the Charles river.

Officers will make a thorough house-to-house canvass in an effort to trace the activities of the dead boy in the week or so preceding his disappearance.

Efforts will be made to ascertain if the boy was seen talking to anyone recognized by neighbors in the vicinity or if he had said anything to them regarding men who might have approached him.

As was pointed out by his father, due to the fact the boy was a twin and received constant attention with his brother, neither he nor the surviving twin, Charles, had any fear of strangers.

Men and women often stopped them on the street to speak to them and comment on their resemblance, the elder Harris said, and often presented them with pennies and other gifts.

SEARCH BARNS

Under these circumstances, the boy would have been easy prey for a degenerate such as police believe would be responsible for his death, it was pointed out.

Playmates of the slain child are also to be questioned by officials although they would not comment on the purpose of this action.

It was intimated, however, that such a gathering might produce information which would be of considerable importance in the probe.

Search of all barns and sheds in the area within a two-mile radius of the point where the lad's shallow grave was discovered will also be made.

It was indicated that there was some hope such a search would produce the overalls and zipper jacket the child was wearing when last seen.

Officials now believe the boy's body was naked except for the shoes he wore when he was encased in burlap and dumped into the hastily-dug grave.

No trace of clothing has been found, although a few scraps of material found in the grave are believed to be from the clothes of his twin brother to determine whether they are remains of his garments.

Questioning of the parents of the slain boy will be undertaken by police after the first shock of the tragedy dulls.

Officials believe they are too heartbroken for the present to endure any fresh reminders of the terrible grief that has stricken their home and have postponed any interrogation regarding the boy's activities for the present.

WHERE LAST SEEN ALIVE

Reconstruction of the crime by police and Medical Examiner Brickley places the hour of the boy's death between 4 and 6 p. m. on the afternoon of his disappearance.

He was last seen alive, so far as police know, by a man employed in a yard a few hundred yards from the scene of his grave.

The man, employed on steel with an acetylene torch, chased Chester and several playmates, including his twin brother, Charles, from the yard because he feared they might be harmed by the flame.

He told officials all the boys left except Chester, who remained at some distance from him.

Believing the boy would not approach nearer, the man told police, he resumed his work and paid no further attention to the lad.

Later, he identified Charles Harris as one of the boys who had been chased from the yard and police are convinced that he was the last person, with the exception of the slayer, who saw Chester alive.

The time that the boys were told to leave the yard was approximately 4 p. m., the man told police.

NO REWARD FOR BOYS

Any hopes that the three Cambridge boys who found the body had of collecting $500 went a-glimmering today.

The original reward offered by the Cambridge City Council specified that the sum would go to any person giving information leading to the apprehension and conviction of the person or persons responsible for the disappearance of Chester Harris.

BOY, 16, IMPALED BY SKI POLE

North Bay, Ont., Jan. 29 (Canadian Press)—Louis Johnson, 16, was reported recovering in a hospital here today, after surgeons had removed the end of a broom handle ski pole upon which the youth had been impaled.

The accident happened near the boy's home at Red Bridge, 16 miles from here. The boy fell and the sharp point of the improvised pole pierced the left side of his body, the point protruding five inches.

Two hours elapsed before the boy's widowed mother telephoned Dr. J. E. I. Joyal of North Bay who advised the broom handle be sawed off close to the body and the boy brought to North Bay by automobile. He was conscious during the hurried trip.

It is the hospital the remaining portion of wood was removed and physicians said no vital organs were affected.

HARRISES FORGIVE SLAYER OF SON

They kneel down on the hard boards of the living room floor and they offer prayers. Weeping softly as they pray, but speaking with heart as well as lips, Mr. and Mrs. Harris, grief-stricken parents of the slain five-year-old Chester, offer forgiveness to their child's slayer.

"Our Father, who art in Heaven," give us the strength this day to carry our great cross," intones Reverend Gilbert M. Leslie, who leads the prayers.

An answer comes in minutes. The father is speaking. He repeats the prayer. Then he adds a few words of his own.

"We forgive them gladly, dear Father—forgive those who trespassed against us."

And he speaks from the heart—fervently and without a trace of bitterness.

MOTHER KEEPS STILL

But the Mother—she keeps still. She's transfixed, as in a trance, and stares blankly ahead. She feels the prayer along, colorless lips, but only words come forth—words from the mouth, not words from the heart.

She weeps softly. Then she shakes her head. It almost seems as though she is trying to drive some gruesome picture from her mind.

She tries and tries again, to repeat the prayer—but only words come forth. Then she straightens up. She kneels with head erect, and she closes her eyes in mute appeal to Heaven.

HUSBAND SMILES

A shade of a smile raced across her face. She struggles with the words, then they come softly, white-breathed:

"We forgive them gladly, Oh Lord, forgive them for the great wrong they did unto us."

The husband smiles benignly and the minister continues his service.

"In your infinite wisdom, Oh God, we know you shall mete the punishment you deem necessary.

"We believe in your infallibility, Dear Father, and place our entire trust in you. We ask forgiveness for the sinner and ask for guidance for ourselves during this trying period. We mourn the loss of Chester Harris."

An involuntary sob breaks forth from the mother's lips and her slight frame shivers slightly at the mention of her boy's name, but she presses her face into her hands and continues praying.

"Please comfort these dear parents, Oh God," the minister adds, and then halts while Mr. Harris carries on:

"We bear no grievance, Our Father, and pray you enfold our little boy in your arms as we would if he were here. Give us the strength to carry on bravely and lend your spiritual guidance that we may give the love and devotion denied Chester to our other four children."

INVOLUNTARY SOB

It is more than an involuntary sob that shakes the frame of frail Mrs. Harris this time. She cries openly and unashamed, and reaching toward the nearby group throws her arms about the little body of 2-year-old Ruth.

Crushing the baby to her breast and gazing heavenward for solace, she prays:

"We need you now, dear Lord, and I know you will not fail us. You have given us a heavy cross to bear but you have made our backs big enough for us to carry the load. But, dear God, please watch over my little boy—"

The voice of the minister breaks in again. He calls upon the Almighty to lessen the load. He begs for future happiness. He asks the Lord to deal with the boy's murderer in his own way and prays that such events will happen no more.

The prayer is finished and the minister arises—but the mother and father continue kneeling. They haven't finished praying yet. They bury their heads in the folds of the arms and speak further with God.

After a few minutes of silent offering they get up from the floor. The husband rises first. He walks over to the window and looks out. The mother has a more difficult time. Her legs are weakened from endless nights of vigil and she rises slowly and uncertainly. Then she, too, makes her way to the window.

She draws the shade away a few inches and she tilts her head sideways as though looking down the street. And then turns to her husband and says:

"I don't know why I did that. I know he (Chester) won't be coming up the street any more. Yet I can't help feeling he is nearby and looking down on us."

The husband draws Mrs. Harris to him. He pulls her head gently onto his chest and strokes her hair.

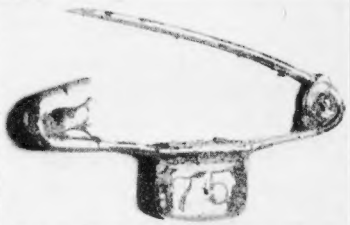
"He is near, darling. He's here with God right now, and he's a lot more happy than any of us. God will take care of Chester, but it is up to us to take good care of the other children."

And they move away from the window, the husband and the wife, and go about their various duties content in the thought that God—and Chester—are watching over them.

Mr. and Mrs. ARNOLD HARRIS.

Here are the shoes worn by little Chester Harris. The boy's mother identified the shoes by the knot she tied on the day he disappeared. From this information, police infer that the boy met death on the day he left home.

Boston Evening American Photo



This big safety pin, numbered "75," was found near the remains of little Chester Harris. Four others of the same type bearing different numbers were located nearby. They are pins of the type used by a laundry or cleansing establishment. They are regarded as important clues. Anyone who may have any knowledge of such pins, is requested to call Boston Evening American city editor at Liberty 4000.

Holes Identify Child's Shoes

Soles of Chester Harris' shoes, worn through in spots, aided in the identification of the body. The father recognized the shoes by the holes.

'Ha Ha' Note Left by Vermont Suicide

"This is the end. Ha! Ha!"

Such was the note found today near the body of Charles E. Crane, 22, of Montpelier, Vt., who cut his wrists with a razor blade in a Greenwich Village rooming house in New York.

An unsuccessful search for work in New York was believed responsible for the act.

AS I SEE IT

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate, Inc., International copyright and all other rights reserved.)

A Florida circuit judge let fly with a decision this week that must have been a toupee-lifter in Washington.

However, we have no doubt that it will bring resounding cheers from many home loaners when it becomes known.

DAMON RUNYON

The government has lately been hearing down on those home loans it dispensed with liberal hand in the great stress of '33. It has been instituting foreclosure proceedings just like any other hard-hearted landlord.

Through its Florida attorneys, the government, as represented by the Federal Home Owners Loan Corp., brought suit to foreclose a $1200 mortgage on the home of a carpenter, who was said to be about 18 payments shy.

The carpenter said he had been out of employment and ill. Therefore, he hadn't been able to keep abreast of his obligations. The government said the carpenter could have made some of the payments, all right, if he had put on a right sturdy effort.

Now let's see what the judge said.

WHAT WAS PURPOSE OF LOAN?

The judge, surrounding his remarks with the usual legal verbiage, said, in effect:

"Why, the purpose of the government loan in the first place was to protect the home-owner from being foreclosed on a mortgage. The home owner had to be in danger of the actual loss of his home before he could get such a loan."

Thus the judge couldn't see that the purpose of the loan was being carried out if the government could come along and foreclose on the home. The owner lost it just as surely as if the original mortgage holder had seized the old homestead over his head.

The judge thought that a foreclosure suit by the government is different from one between private individuals, and he temporarily suspended the action brought against the carpenter.

He didn't say that the carpenter never has to pay the government loan. Indeed, the judge ordered a trustee appointed to collect the payments as rapidly as possible, with the defendant's ability to settle taken into consideration.

But he didn't say exactly when the carpenter must settle, and the government will probably hustle into the Supreme Court with that one for fear that the decision may be taken to mean that a Home Loan debt can go on, and on, and on.

DEAL'S GREATEST HEADACHE

The Home Loan business has become one of the administration's greatest headaches in some parts of the country, though it is said that this is the first time a foreclosure action by the government hasn't been sustained. No appeal has ever been taken from a foreclosure decree on a Home Loan foreclosure, as far as we know.

Yet, to a lay mind, there seems to be much logic in the ruling of the Florida judge. Certainly there is if the carpenter's story of unemployment and illness is true.

Many a home owner in this country who is carrying a government loan hasn't been able since he got the loan to find employment sufficient to provide for himself and his family and pay off the loan, too.

The Home Loan operators have discovered that a lot of home owners got loans that they apparently had no intention of ever trying to repay—that they haven't paid interest, or taxes, or anything else since they got the loans. They regard the loans as "found money," just as any moocher regards an unexpected "touch."

Nevertheless, there are many thousands of honest home-owners who are carrying loans that they would like to repay, but they are prevented from doing so by circumstances over which they have no control, and foreclosure in these cases would most assuredly defeat the original purpose of the loans which was to relieve the home owners of the threat of losing their homes.

TIMES NOT SO VASTLY IMPROVED

It hasn't been so very long since the loans were granted, and times haven't vastly improved with millions of people in this country, as Mr. Roosevelt recognized in his inaugural address. A great many home owners are in little better case now than they were in '33.

However, it is only fair to say that the government seems to be trying hard to exercise discretion in the matter of the home loans, and generally makes generous allowance for those that it feels are doing their best to pay. The headache in the matter is mainly political.

The delinquent home owners, and especially those who like to regard the loans as free favors from a beneficent administration, muster all manner of political influence to avoid paying and at the same time to avoid foreclosure, and it has become a right delicate problem in Washington.

It is admittedly one of the slowest and toughest collections the administration has on its books, and it has a world of them.

BETTER TO WRITE OFF BAD LOANS

When the home loan business was first started, they didn't have the time, or facility, for making all the inquiry into human character and credit that a careful mortgager might make into the status of an applicant for a loan.

So many a loan went to persons who wouldn't have been deemed good risks by their neighbors under any circumstances. It is mainly these persons who yell, "Help, murder, police" when Uncle Sam tries to collect from them.

But we think it would be better to write off a lot of bad loans than to take the home of one honest home owner, who would like to pay, but can't. Uncle Sam at least has more of a chance of getting back these bad loans than of recovering his bad loss on tea.war.

He has the chance on his bad home loans that the moochers may one day be afflicted by conscience, and settle up, even if he never forecloses. And you are well aware that his war debtors have no conscience.

MURPHY READY IN NON-UNION AUTO 'SIT'

force. There was a resolution in the State senate two days ago demanding that I explain why the sit-down strikers have not been evicted.

"Yesterday, representatives of the Flint Alliance (non-strike organization) came here for no good purpose. They tried to embarrass me.

"Today you come here threatening to sit down in my office until I evict the sitdown strikers. You ought to be ashamed that you are being used in this way.

"Picture it all together and you see the sinister work of agents provocateur, General Motors officials tell me they are not responsible. I hope they are not. But I am going to find out."

The workers indicated they would decide later in the day whether they would go through with their sit-down threats.

EACH MAN GETS $7.50

George Gilbert, heading the delegation, gave each man a $7.50 check before the group left the conference. Gilbert said the delegation represents 12,500 employes.

"We feel our forefathers fought against taxation without representation," Gilbert said. "If it's lawful for the sit-down strikers to confiscate the Fisher Body plants in Flint by sitting down, it's lawful for us to sit down in the governor's office.

"We do not want to interfere with the business of the state, but we feel it is the duty of the governor to see that the sit-down strikers in Flint are removed from the plants."

NEW DANGER FRONTS

While General Motors launched its second court action to oust sit-down strikers from two Flint plants, Saginaw and Anderson, Ind., became the new danger fronts in the labor war.

Union forces, 2500 strong, it was announced—planned to invade Saginaw Sunday afternoon to hold a mass meeting following a mob attack on six United Auto Workers organizers there.

In strike-torn Anderson, the union here announced, Ed Hall, UAW organizer, planned to go through with a "peaceful" demonstration today despite refusal of Indiana's Governor Townsend to furnish protection of the state militia against possible violence between striking and non-striking Guests, Motors workers there.

NEW ATTACK ON UNION MEN

Meanwhile, police reported a new attack on union men at the Michigan Steel Corporation plant in suburban Ecorse. Two CIO organizers—Julius Sobrensky and Demoff —were beaten up by three men, police said, they they distributed union handbills among workers.

Capital Pushes Toward Settlement

Washington, Jan. 29 (INS)—The General Motors strike deadlock today formed a fishy focal point for concerted Federal attack on labor strife on 20 fronts.

The government moved in five separate actions with the hope of smoothing the way to, and perhaps speeding, ultimate settlement. These actions were:

1—Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins dispatched an aide to the strike scene to investigate union charges of General Motors coercion.

2—The Senate civil liberties committee sent one of its men out for the same purpose.

3—The National Labor Relations Board moved to proceed with its 1936 complaints against the big motors combine.

4—Miss Perkins sounded out Congressional leaders on her request for emergency legislation.

5—A forward-wise glimpse of President Roosevelt's new labor legislation program, provided by Miss Perkins, revealed he will ask for a flexible collective bargaining law "even broader than the Wagner Labor Relations Act."

Strike March Looms In Indiana City

Anderson, Ind., Jan. 29 (INS)—The strike situation was tense here today with reports that automotive workers from South Bend and other points may march on the city to assist General Motors employes on strike here.

As a federal investigation of strike conditions here loomed, authorities continued to arrest outsiders who came to assist the sit-down strikers. James Rowland of Flint, Mich., organizer for the United Automotive Workers of America, was jailed upon his arrival.

Edward Hall, a national vice-commander of the automotive workers told Governor M. Clifford Townsend that he would appeal directly to Washington for intervention if the state did not give protection to sit-down strikers in Anderson.

Governor Townsend told Hall that the entire national guard was "saving human lives" in the flood area and there were no troops immediately available.

Ex-Boston Woman Faces Motherhood In Coast Jail

Having nurtured one of her children in a jail cell, Mrs. Dorothy Harrington Goodrich, former Boston secretary, faces the prospect of rearing another child behind bars, according to word today from San Francisco.

Once stenographer for a Concord, N. H., judge and later trusted secretary for several Boston attorneys, Mrs. Goodrich has been in trouble with the law for 15 years, mainly in the matter of bad checks.

In San Francisco, according to deputies, the former Cambridge girl, now 35 years old and a resident of Menlo Park, elite suburb of the coast city, has been sentenced to two terms of a year each, to run concurrently.

She pleaded guilty to passing 20 worthless checks on merchants and also to a charge of forgery.

Probation was denied and officials said that with arrival of the stork imminent, it is probable that the child will be born in a window-barred nursery.

Less than two years ago, in Los Angeles, a county jail sentence was held in abeyance to permit the birth of twins. One twin died. The other she cared for in her cell, until released on parole after three months.

During this trial Mrs. Goodrich raised the novel defense that just before childbirth she always suffered from "brain fog," which led her to pass worthless checks.

She was married in 1925 to Robert L. Goodrich, Cambridge salesman. A few months later she was arrested at Glendale and Santa Barbara, in California, but escaped jail when her bridegroom assumed responsibility.

Out of her local difficulties with the law she served two terms at Sherborn Reformatory for Women.

Man Stabbed on Atlantic Avenue

Three knife wounds in his body, a man identified as Thomas M. Lee, 39, of West Third street, South Boston, was found lying on Atlantic avenue near Northern avenue today.

At Haymarket Relief Hospital his name was placed on the danger list. He was found suffering from two wounds in his right side, one penetrating his stomach, and another in his neck.

A man was held for questioning at the Milk street station in connection with an attack with a dangerous weapon.

Baby Born With Lower Tooth

Cleveland, Jan. 29 (AP) — Tiny Albert Pirosi, Jr., who has been in the world nine days, has something that some 7200 other babies preceding him at Lutheran Hospital did not have.

He was born with a fine lower tooth.

But today there was a possibility it would not be with him very long. For Albert's mother, Mrs. Helen Pirosi, 26, and nurses are juggling the tooth whenever he is awake in order to rescue it as a talisman before he swallows it.

SEA HURRICANE TAKES DEATH TOLL OF 68

London, Jan. 29 (AP)—Stubborn storms spread havoc on land and water across western Europe today. At least sixty-eight persons were reported to have perished at sea.

The latest ship to fail to the fury of the wind and sea was the 1100-ton tanker Olifer. She sank off the small island of Borkum in the North Sea. Eleven of a crew of 14 apparently were lost. The great liner Europa stood by, able to rescue only three men.

However, the storm-beaten 4855-ton Brazilian liner Santos, unheard from since reporting she was disabled and drifting toward the Rocky Berlengas Islands off Portugal, was towed to safety at Lisbon, Lloyds reported. One hundred persons were aboard.

Floods were an inland ally of the storm. Fishing boats carried food to inhabitants of Legraadurol, a flood-marooned village on the Allier river in central France.

Flooded ponds along the border of England and Scotland froze solid, isolating communities from overland travel.

WHIPPED BY WINDS

Treacherous seas, whipped by a hurricane in the North Atlantic, pounded the Scottish east coast and tied up virtually all shipping. At Lossiemouth, Scotland, mountainous waves endangered the whole harbor entrance.

Blizzards borne on the driving winds, piled up high drifts in the south of England, marooning scores of motorists all night in some areas.

Rain-swollen rivers in southern France inundated low-lying farms and roads, particularly in the Rhone Valley.

FIRE ENGINE UPSETS; 1 HURT

James Daley, 30, driver of a Quincy fire department truck, was injured today when his machine got out of control and overturned, speeding to a blaze on Newbury avenue, Atlantic.

Daley was taken to Quincy hospital, suffering from lacerations of the scalp, concussion of the brain and a sprained back.

The accident occured on Hancock street, Atlantic. The fire was a cellar smudge in the home of Mrs. Fannie1 Farrell.

The smash-up of Daley's truck was the Quincy fire department's first 1937 auto mishap.

Last year one man was killed, one lost a leg and several others were injured in a series of crashes which happened as apparatus was on its way to answer alarms.

Coast Lumberjack Strike Settled

St. Paul, Jan. 29 (AP)—Settlement of the lumberjack strike which has tied up timber traffic in northern Minnesota for the past three weeks was announced today by A. E. Stolt of the State Industrial Commission.

Woman, 89, Follows Husband in Death

Worcester, Jan. 29—Three days after the death of her 90-year-old husband, Mrs. Bridget Hickey, 89, of Fountain street, died at Worcester City Hospital today from injuries when she collapsed last Wednesday.

The elderly woman suffered concussion of the brain when, in collapsing, she rolled off a couch in her home. She never regained consciousness.

Nahant Descendant Dies in Westboro

Descendant of one of the three original settlers of Nahant, Charles Frederick Johnson, 92, died early today at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Sylvia MacGuffog, in Westboro.

He was one of the best-known and oldest residents of Nahant, was the father of former State Senator Charles Cabot Johnson, town treasurer and tax collector, and for 72 years served as sexton of the Boston Church in Nahant—without missing a Sunday service.

Educated in the Nahant schools, Mr. Johnson later became an expert gardener and horticulturist. From 1890 until 1906 he also conducted the Willow Knoll dairy farm in Nahant.

Five other sons survive, in addition to the town treasurer, and there are also 11 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Monday at Nahant.

COMMUNITY AID FUND REACHES $1,751,542

Contributions to Greater Boston's 1937 Community Fund campaign reached a total of $1,751,542 today.

$60,000 FOR FLOODS

Emphasizing the fact that $60,000 of the campaign's $1,100,000 quota has been pledged to the Metropolitan Chapter of the American Red Cross for flood relief work, Chairman Cutler, nevertheless, reminded the public today that the real need to be met by the Community Fund is a local one.

"Within this two-week period," he said, "we must raise a sum sufficient to enable 104 philanthropic institutions to carry on, for a full year, activities vital to the welfare of more than 900,000 unfortunate men, women and children."

Leading all Greater Boston towns and cities today in contributions collected was Westwood, with its quota subscribed 122.4 per cent.

Next on the list were Concord, 70.8 per cent; Winchester, 45 per cent; Natick, 41.7 per cent; Dover, 39.2 per cent, and Belmont, 37.6 per cent.

HOLDS PLEDGE LEAD

The industry and finance division of the general campaign organization held its lead today in pledges received.

Its textiles group reported 85.3 per cent of its quota raised, the banking group entering second with 62.9 per cent. Third was the chemicals group with 61.5 per cent. Said General Chairman Cutler:

"We must outdo our 1936 victory. Although we are ahead of where we were last year at this stage, our minimum goal this time is $410,000 more than it was a year ago. Then we netted only 77 per cent of our needs of our 104 hospitals and social agencies.

"This year we are striking toward really adequate support of these vital human services. We have four new agencies in the campaign, not including the recently added Boston Metropolitan Red Cross chapter's flood relief quota of $60,000."

Many Families Helped by Community Fund

Deprived of the necessities of life through no fault of their own, this Roxbury mother and her little one will be cared for through the Family Welfare Society, one of the many health and social agencies receiving help from the Greater Boston Community Fund. Miss Mae T. Mooney, right, secretary of the society, is investigating this needy case.

At the South End Nursery, a beneficiary of the Greater Boston Community Fund, we find this pretty, curly-haired little girl enjoying her daily ration of hot soup, milk and bread, the necessary food for the building of strong bodies. Your contributions to the Community Fund is helping to rout sickness and hunger among the less fortunate.

LEATHER STRIKE LYNN THREAT

A general strike of 10,000 leather workers, affecting more than six Massachusetts cities, loomed today as a result of a disagreement between Lynn union officials and the Boss Kodd Company of that city.

The Lynn local of the National Leather Workers' Union voted to strike last night unless the manufacturers against the Market street plant before February 8 and put some 46 back.

The disagreement revolves around the manufacturers' refusal to a two-year agreement with the union instead of the one-year plan which is now in effect.

Percival Phillips, Journalist, Dies

London, Jan. 29 (INS)—Sir Percival Phillips, an American-born writer whose dispatches from the battlefields of France during the World War earned him world fame, died in a nursing home here today after a brief illness.

Sir Percival, born in Brooklyn, N.Y., had been special foreign correspondent of the London Daily Mail and later the London Daily Telegraph since 1922.

Wills All to Brother

Salem, Jan. 29—Cutting off a mother and three half-sisters because they "never showed any interest" in her, Miss Annie C. Hoe, of Beverly, bequeathed her entire estate to another brother, Ernest H. Perkins of Oxford street, Beverly, according to her will, filed for probate here.

GERMANY WAITS VITAL ACTION BY HITLER

Berlin, Jan. 29 (AP)—Germany ready for Chancellor Hitler's announcement of some momentous decision, completed preparations today for the first session of the Reichstag since reoccupation of the Rhineland.

Advance plans indicated the session called by Hitler for tomorrow to receive "an announcement from the government" would be of epochal importance.

Although the entire Reich has engaged in a whispered debate for weeks, even high officials admitted they did not know what decisions Hitler had chosen to disclose.

Most observers expected the announcement would concern one of three things:

1—Acquisition of a colony or colonial rights with appointment of a cabinet minister for colonies.

2—New powers and honors for Colonel-General Herman Goering, his chief aide, who has long been rumored to be the next chancellor.

3—Dissolution of the Reichstag in its present form.

Fire Engine-Auto Crash Hurts 5

Danvers, Jan. 29—A fire engine and private automobile crash, in which five persons were injured here, was under official investigation today.

Most seriously hurt of the victims were Earl Elliott, 19, and his mother, Mrs. Charles Elliott, 48, both of Pine street, and Mrs. Edith R. Hook, 60, of Ash street.

The son's jaw was fractured, Mrs. Elliott's arm was broken, and Mrs. Hook suffered fractures of ankle and hip.

Two firemen were bruised. The collision occurred at Elm and Ash streets.

Worcester Hit-Run Trial for Collegian

Worcester, Jan. 29—James J. McDermott, 20-year-old Holy Cross College senior and member of a wealthy Staten Island, N. Y. family, will be tried on February 5 on two charges growing out of a fatal hit-run accident, it was decided in court here today.

McDermott was not in court. He was represented by counsel. Police charged him with leaving the scene of an accident and driving so as to endanger. Charges grew out of the killing of 3-year-old Pasquale Zolamo at 5 a. m. Monday.

Driver Killed

Police and railroad officials sought today to establish circumstances leading to a train and automobile crash in which Ernest Knolla, Jr., 22, of Union street, South Weymouth, was instantly killed at a grade crossing near his home. His body was hurled more than 50 feet.

GAS VICTIM SAVED BY HOSPITAL AIDE

In the second time in a week, prompt action by City Hospital ambulance attendants saved another victim of gas poisoning today.

Responding to an emergency call a City Hospital ambulance manned by James O'Halloran, the driver, and Louis Rosenfield, the attendant, rushed to 28 Gray street, South End.

In the gas-filled kitchen at that address they found William Mosey, 37, lying unconscious on the kitchen floor. The call had been put in by his sister, Catherine.

Rosenfield immediately began artificial respiration treatment. Meanwhile O'Halloran called the fire department's rescue squad.

By the time the fire department's pulmotor squad had responded to the call, however, they found Mosey had been revived as a result of Rosenfield's efforts.

Mosey shook hands with his rescuer and remarked:

"I'm glad you came in time to save my life. I'm sure I would have died if it hadn't been for your quick work."

Mosey was taken to the City Hospital for treatment for gas inhalation. He will recover, the hospital reported.

Just one week ago, two other hospital attendants "snatched" a woman who tailed and told them she was about to commit suicide by gas inhalation.

They found her telephone number and directed police to her address in time to save her life.

THREE SPECIAL ISSUES FACE CONGRESS

Washington, Jan. 29 (AP)—The President is considering sending three special messages to Congress.

One of them will deal with conservation of water resources. Roosevelt outlined at his press conference today to discuss the subjects at the utmost.

Discussing a wide variety of subjects, the President said plans for permanent constructive legislation were to be considered during the.

He has already talked with Chairman Pittman (D-Nev.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and Secretary Hull on the subject.

The second step, he said, will be when Pittman discusses the matter with the state department and then talks it over with Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader and other members of the Senate Relations Committee.

NO DIFFERENCES

Pittman already has introduced a bill. Asked if there were any differences between the Nevada Senator and the State Department on Provisions the President said there were no differences over objectives although there might be some slight changes of phraseology in order to reach them.

Roosevelt disclosed that he and the Civil Service Commission are studying the possibility of improving the quality of federal personnel under the civil service by holding more frequent examinations and limiting them to a certain number of people.

NEW LEGISLATION

The President said the move might require new legislation.

Roosevelt also said he supposed he would have to sign the bill authorizing $5,000,000 for 1937 seed loans.

He vetoed a similar bill last year for many applications for loans were made, however, that he later made approximately any $50,000,000 available for 1936.

Toward the close of his meeting with the press, Roosevelt remarked he was considering a trip to Warm Springs, Ga., early in March, but his plans are only tentative.

Whether he can leave Washington will depend upon the Congressional situation, he added.

Hurley Ill, Calls Council Tomorrow

Governor Hurley, still at his home in Cambridge today suffering from a cold contracted earlier in the week, issued a call for a special meeting of the Governor's Council for 11 a. m. tomorrow.

At this meeting the council will attempt to legalize its vote of last Wednesday in approving the lowering of the interest rate on $5,000,000 of Boston & Maine bonds from 4 to 3 per cent, under which the state gives up interest amounting to $600,000.

When the council met Wednesday, it was pointed out, it had before it the state treasurer's proposal for a reduction of the interest rate to 2½ per cent.

Councilor Daniel H. Coakley, who had not for the full 4 per cent, raised the question at the time that the 3 per cent proposition was not formally before the council, and that the body had already voted in favor of the 2½ per cent figure.

CLOSED LOWELL BANK DIVIDEND

An additional dividends of 20 per cent to depositors in the commercial department of the closed Lowell Trust Company, amounting to $261,000, was announced today by Bank Commissioner William P. Husband, Jr.

Depositors in the bank's savings department have already been paid in full and this dividend is being paid to 2400 commercial depositors.

This payment will increase the total percentage paid commercial depositors to 45 per cent and bring the total amount paid to all depositors in the bank to date up to $2,040,000.

The total amount paid to the savings depositors was $1,400,000 or 95.

12 Navy Bombers Land in Honolulu

Honolulu, Jan. 29 (AP)—Hurtling through thick weather in the last stages of three record-breaking flight, 12 huge United States naval seaplanes completed the longest over-water mass flight in history at 9 a. m. today (4:30 a. m. E. T.).

They officially covered the 2,551 miles from San Diego to Honolulu in 21 hours, 45 minutes elapsed time.

During the last 300 miles the squadron maneuvered between altitudes of 2,000 and 12,000 feet to escape what Lieut.-Commander William H. McDade described as "very bad weather."

British Ship Hits Spain Mine, Sinks

Bilbao, Spain, Jan. 29 (AP)—A ship believed to have been British struck a mine near here today, the result, it was reported, of striking an explosive mine.

The vessel was believed to have been of about 4000 tons. A quantity of wreckage had been sighted.

ELAINE BARRIE AND NEW PLAY EXPERIENCE CAST WOES

ELAINE BARRIE

Stars Quit Show Being Staged to Feature Ariel

By ADA HANIFIN

(Dramatic Critic of the San Francisco Examiner)
Written Especially for Universal Service

San Francisco, Jan. 29 (US)—Paranoiac verse "Sick Characters In Search of an Author."

This reviewer could write "A ville in search of a cast," based on three weeks' efforts trying to solve the mystery that envelops "The Return of Hannibal" with Elaine Barrie Barrymore.

The "opus" is by Amory Hare, wife of Dr. James P. Hutchinson, of Philadelphia, who is master of the Rosetree hounds, oldest and most famed pack in America. The play will be given its world premiere here next Monday night.

There are rumors that John Barrymore, financed the production prior to Elaine Barrie Barrymore's suit for divorce.

CAUSES RIFT

Before the play went into rehearsal, however, where one in authority told me that John Barrymore would play Hannibal.

When Barrymore found he couldn't play the role, "because of ill health," and his stage-struck wife insisted upon playing it, the production without him, there followed the rift which led to the divorce courts.

The cast seems to be built around Elaine with the greatest secrecy.

No one can find out the nature or importance in casting rank of the only man, whom Hannibal confides in one of three women in the resuscitated Hannibal's past and private life.

ACTRESS DROPPED

It was first announced that one of these three women would be played by Cecil B. De Mille's adopted daughter, Katharine De Mille.

She has been mysteriously dropped from the cast.

Did her glamour cast La Barrymore in the shade?

William Farnum, who was named in the beginning to play the second main lead, is no longer mentioned. Did he lose a rehearsal to a hair?

Is it possible that Ralph Kettering, Broadway theatrical man, has agreed the Barrymore good judgment cast Elaine Barrymore in the romantic lead?

"She has only a bit in the play," an advance agent confided with his head down.

But after inquiring about the role of Claudia from an unattesting source—Claudia will be played by the second ex-Mrs. Barrymore—this reviewer learned that Claudia is the only woman with whom Hannibal falls madly and hopelessly in love.

Bride Shot By Former Admirer

Taunton, Jan. 29 — Mrs. Tessie A. Valvoulitis, 24-year-old bride of less than a fortnight, is in critical condition at Morton hospital, here, today, allegedly shot by a former admirer.

Police believe the young wife's assailant to have been a man who called at city hall and studied the record of her marriage, and now being sought.

His visit to the registry was only a few minutes before the alleged murder attempt.

The victim was shot through the chest and through one arm, and her skull was fractured, apparently by a blow.

Mrs. Volvoulitis was married Jan. 17 to Charles Volvoulitis, Fall River restaurant owner. He was in Fall River at the time of the shooting.

Balk Tunnel Bill

The final attempt of the year to have the state take over the operation of the Sumner traffic tunnel, which has reported a deficit ever since its opening, ended in the Senate when that body refused to substitute a bill to that effect and accepted the adverse report of the joint committee on ways and means.

JURY REPORT NEAR AFTER VICE PROBE

Completion of three days' presentation of evidence against Brookline town officials on charges of graft in connection with interstate vice rings before a Norfolk county grand jury is expected late today.

At least two resignations of prominent Brookline town officials are expected as the result of the report that will be filed by the grand jury with Judge Edward F. Handy.

Speculation was rife in Brookline and Dedham as to just how many indictments might be returned by the jurors.

Resuming the witness stand early today, Chief of Police H. Allen Rutherford, of Brookline, was the first witness called.

16-YEAR-OLD WITNESS

District Attorney Edmund R. Dewing announced that five witnesses would appear before the grand jury before the evidence had been presented completely.

One of these witnesses is 16-year-old Margaret Toth, Passaic, N. J., high school girl, whose presence so far-away home of ill-fame precipitated the widespread probe.

Patrolman Dennis Scully, Brookline plainclothes officer, who was spirited out of the Dedham courthouse under guard of four officers after a verbal battle with newspaper photographers, was recalled to the grand jury room for the third time in as many days.

At the same time he stated it was no belief that the indictments, if there were any, would not be secret.

Queried on the sudden and unexpected appearance of Judge Philip S. Parker, Brookline justice, before the grand jury, Dewing stated:

"I did not summon Judge Parker to appear before the grand jury."

CAMERAMEN ARRESTED

Whether or not Judge Parker would be recalled to the witness stand to testify again today remained a question.

Judge Parker's exit from the courthouse, under guard of a deputy sheriff, resulted in the arrest of four Boston cameramen, whose films were speedily "dismissed" by Judge Hanify.

The cameramen were arrested on charges of assault after they had made a picture of Judge Parker as he emerged from the courthouse.

Deputy Sheriff Everett Caldwell, who had been ordered to escort the judge to his car, raised his hand and said:

"No pictures!"

NEWSMAN TESTIFIES

Like heat-lightning the flash bulbs flickered, and the pictures were snapped. Four Dedham officers, on order of Caldwell, took the cameramen in custody.

Another precedent was established in Massachusetts courts when a newspaperman covering the case was suddenly ordered to appear before the grand jury to testify.

HURLEY DEFIES BOND RATE RAP

In the face of sharp criticism by Executive Councillor Daniel H. Coakley, State Treasurer William E. Hurley today defended reduction of interest on Boston & Maine railroad bonds as a just application of the commonwealth's sinking fund.

He said he advocated lowering the interest rate from 4 per cent, the former figure, to 3 per cent, effective on bonds maturing February 1, because of the railroad's agreement to redeem $1,200,000 worth of the bonds, at par, before 1950.

Were it not for this agreement on the part of the railroad, he said, the state would be faced with the prospect of disposing of the bonds at a sacrifice.

Boys Start Fires

Careless use of matches by boys who used the space for a clubroom is believed by police and fire officials today to have caused the fire which destroyed a barn in the rear of a house in Metropolitan avenue, Roslindale.

Louisville Is Thankful

Hail Boston Police For Flood Aid

By JAMES F. McENANEY

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 29—Boston police, working in this city's flood-soaked area, today began the task of assisting in searching for the bodies of persons unable to escape from their inundated homes.

With the Boston police radio station set up on the top floor of the Pendennis Club, police radio cars and power boats, equipped with short wave radio sets, were being directed to homes and buildings where bodies were found.

With the death list steadily mounting, it was believed that by the time the floods had receded the death list would total 300.

HINCHEY DECLINES

The Boston police radio station was being operated by power generated through gasoline motors under the direction of Patrolman William Paine and George Smith.

Patrolmen Robert McGeough and Joseph Murphy alternated in the broadcasting of messages.

Lt. Lawrence Waitt was in command of the station. In the meantime Lt. James Hinchey, in command of 20 Boston and 20 Philadelphia patrolmen, patrolled sections in the downtown business area.

Mayor Neville Miller offered the job of acting superintendent of police to Lieutenant Hinchey, but the Hub officer declined because there were higher ranking officers from other cities in the area.

Mayor Miller, in an interview with this reporter today said:

"The residents of Louisville how to the City of Boston for the splendid co-operation and assistance rendered the stricken of this city.

"The work that the Boston police department is doing here is remarkable and I know the citizens of this city will never forget it.

"Through the Boston Evening American in behalf of the citizens of this city and the State of Kentucky I want to thank the people of Boston for the aid and assistance given us.

"To Mayor Frederick Mansfield, Police Commissioner Joseph F. Timilty, my hat is off to both."

COUPLES EMBRACED

Throughout the night and into the early morning hours, police and soldiers were removing bodies from the flooded districts.

In many instances the searching parties reported that the bodies of aged couples were found clinging to one another and floating in flooded homes.

The majority of the dead, however, are victims over fifty years of age.

The dead are being brought to Cave Hill Cemetery, just outside the flooded area, and are being buried with simple rites of the graveyard.

A small wooden marker, giving the name and address of the buried person, is placed over the grave. In many instances where the identity is unknown a number is placed over the grave and the description of the victim and where discovered is filled with the local board of health and department of public safety.

Dead, Homeless In 10 States

By Associated Press

A recapitulation of the dead and homeless in ten flood states follows:

State	Dead	Homeless
Kentucky	225	347,000
Illinois	11	50,000
Ohio	14	250,000
Indiana	9	75,000
Tennessee	10	125,000
Missouri	17	41,800
Arkansas	25	75,000
Mississippi	3	5,000
West Virginia	13	64,000
Pennsylvania	3	3,000
Totals	330	1,035,000

LODGE DEMANDS RELIEF BILL

Special to Boston Evening American

Washington, Jan. 29—An amendment providing for the distribution of relief funds on a ratio basis of a state's population and valuation was urged by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., before the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Carrying out his campaign platform for "a fair distribution of Federal funds" the junior senator from Massachusetts requested that the relief appropriation to the states be based one-half on population and one-half on valuation.

Also, under the amendment, funds would be expended by local authorities as long advocated by both Senator Lodge and Governor Hurley.

Dispossessed by the Flood, But They Eat

International News Photograph Service

Soldiers (in campaign hats and khaki) keep order in Louisville as crowds of flood refugees flock to emergency food depots set up in higher sections of the water-swept city. There were no disorders.

International News Photograph Service

Women and children refugees from the flood were cheered as much by the smiles of the tireless girls serving them as they were by the hot coffee that eased their woes. Thousands fled their homes, but few were allowed to go hungry.

Alan Frazer Sees:

Nights of Horror In Louisville

uge with a flickering lamp, for whose few hours supply of kerosene he has waited in line with hundreds of others. Flashlights and flashlight batteries are at a premium.

North, east, south and west, behind the black curtain, the ominous river coils its flood and brews poisons out of the backwash of innumerable sewers, for that I, the way the flood sneaked into the big residential districts, foaming out of the streets. Black oil streaks the flood. People surrender themselves to the embrace of the night, fearing a sudden flash of encircling flame. Throw themselves on the mercy of the night-presaging another day of rain. One day has just closed with a pea-soup murk overhead, above which invisible planes roared to hazardous landings. Neither moon nor stars furnish encouragement for the day to come.

Dawn breaks, charcoal grey. Refugees storm the airport, clamoring for plane passage out of the dismal city where the flood has foreclosed on their homes.

Rain does not dampen their earnestness to fly. Expectant mothers carrying away to hospitals over across the flood. Mothers with children clinging to their fingers, making their families in the air, rather than take a chance with fever.

The day wears on and the crowd still milks about. Diminishes by ever so little when a transport ship takes off. Grows even larger before the next arrives.

MUST SHOW PASSES

Inbound to Louisville, passengers must show passes to board planes to Indianapolis, Dayton, Columbus and other points.

Outbound from Louisville, first come first served, and a long line waiting. Now and again, a ship takes off on a flight to sound a warning over the heads of the citizens: the sky speaks:

"Boil all drinking water. Boil all drinking water. Boil all drinking water for 20 minutes. For 20 minutes. Or one drop of iodine to a quart of water.

"The river has fallen slightly. The river has fallen slightly."

Scarcely a refugee lifts his head. Backs are bent under the burdens of cherished belongings. A voice in the clouds is nothing compared with the silent malice of the flood. The river may have fallen slightly, but old man river still is king.

FAMILIES SEPARATED

Surprising how many persons don't know where their families are. Husbands marooned in the downtown section, which was made an island by the flood. Living in the buildings where they worked—when Louisville did work before the disaster. Wives marooned elsewhere, or safe in the highlands or may be sick from exhaustion and worry. Maybe drowned.

Yet people are trying to fly into Louisville by plane to search for their relatives. To make a search that is well nigh impossible.

I have talked with many relief workers who in the course of their duties hope eventually to come suddenly on mothers, fathers, or wives and children. And to find them safe and well. Meanwhile they care for the afflicted at all schools and public buildings in the dry part of the city. Feed them and cheer them up. Rush for doctors if they are ill. Quietly notify the authorities, if they are dead.

STILL SEEK BODIES

Nobody dares ask how long conditions may last. If the flood has gone down a little, it is too little for anybody to vouch for. Boats still chug past the second stories of buildings. The police still cruise only along the fringes of the residential sections in their search for bodies.

Surveyed through a pall of clouds from five thousand feet in the air, the water—much of it stagnating—appears to have yielded not so much as an inch of ground to be by the living.

The actual departure of the flod is many days distant. The real story of what the flood did, is yet to be learned.

Not a factory wheel in the city is turning. Only food stores in the residential sections, and a few restaurants down town, are open. The flood has declared a holiday, with blue laws enforced. The store clocks are all stopped at 20 minutes of 12, recording the hour and minute when electric power failed Monday night.

MORE POLICE ARRIVE

Nearly every hour brings a new detachment of police, flying in from the north, south and east.

Besides Boston's 21 officers, there are 59 here from Philadelphia, 35 from Pittsburgh, 30 from the Pennsylvania State force; and details from Syracuse, Atlanta, Champaign, Ill., Coldwater, Mich., Bristol, Va., South Haven, Mich., Johnson City, Tenn., Duluth, Minn., from the Maryland State Constabulary and other departments. Officially the city is under command of the mayor, Neville Miller, with the special designation of provost general. He has been left with precedence over Brigadier-General Daniel Van Voorhis, commander of the regular army troops here.

General Van Voorhis has been ordered by General Malin Craig, chief of staff of the army, at Washington, to submit to the working arrangement, due to technicalities prohibiting the actual declaration of martial law. In fact, however, even the operation of the law, in the normal channels, has been halted by the river's invasion.

Flu Grips Thousands In Flood Refugee Havens

volunteered for treatment in the first night against plague.

Five mothers and 39 babies were harbored in the juvenile court building. Ten expectant mothers waited for their "flood babies" in another make-shift hospital.

NEW PERIL IMPENDS

United States Coast Guard cutters patrolled up and down on "picket duty" to watch for weak spots or new breaks in the levees. Warned of impending danger, the hordes of refugees streamed from the low-lying marginal lands along the Mississippi.

Tent cities sprang up on highlands and ridges 20 miles from the river to house refugees. At Barton, near Helena, Ark., a single concentration camp received 15,000 refugees. Ten additional centers were spotted. Thousands of other refugees were removed to East Arkansas cities and to Memphis.

And last night, in the darkness around the campfires, voices lifted in prayerful, hymn-like-touched song:

"River, Stay 'Way From My Door."

Anxiety deepened in Cairo—60 feet below the river—as the waters crept higher.

Through the night the debris-littered tide inched upward, reaching a stage of 58.4 feet—almost to the point gained before the Birds Point-New Madrid "fuse plug" was dynamited to save the city.

A new three-foot bulwark of sand bags, topping the 60-foot sea wall, lent some comfort to the 5000 remaining inhabitants. It was still to be tested, however, and the river was only 1.6 feet below the top of the concrete wall.

SHOVEL ARMY OF 100,000

Army engineers predicted a crest of 62 feet.

Ranging southward from Cairo, a pick-and-shovel army of 100,000 toiled like beavers to fortify the billion-dollar levee system that guards the rich cotton delta lands along the Mississippi.

The new surge of the flood, gathering enormous pressure from the Ohio, spread over new territory as night fell today.

The pilot of a plane, returning to Memphis after an aerial survey of the Cairo-to-Memphis danger zone, reported whole villages under water.

The village of Tomato, Ark., was reported eaves-deep in muddy water. Most of the 300 residents perched in barn lofts, in attics and in second-story rooms—waiting to be rescued, or determined to "stick it out."

ARKANSAS SHOWS PRIDE

Every levee throughout the Mississippi system was holding today—and U. S. Army engineers predicted they would continue to hold, barring the unexpected.

In Little Rock, Ark., Governor Carl E. Bailey declined Eastern offers of help, declaring Arkansas wants to fight its own flood battle—with aid only from the U. S. Army and the Red Cross—"until we are completely locked."

Meanwhile stricken communities in the Ohio valley states, assured that the worst was past, pushed plans for rehabilitation and the care of the homeless, aided by state and federal governments.

Homeless numbered 1,035,000, latest estimates said, with 330 known dead. Property loss estimates still stood at $400,000,000.

As the crest of the nation's most devastating flood passed slowly down the Ohio a pick and shovel army of 100,000 men fortified a fertile, cotton growing valley in the south against the impact of flood waters which will pour down the Mississippi next week.

3 CHIEF DANGER POINTS

Other danger points along the 1000-mile front were at New Madrid, Mo., Hickman, Ky., and Mellwood, Ark., 38 miles below Helena.

Like a fort in military siege, 4000 men battled behind a 60-foot seawall to save Cairo, southern Illinois shipping center, from the mounting flood crest. Most of the city's 13,000 population had fled to safety.

Several days ago, engineers had "pulled the stopper" in the great 231,000-acre floodway below Cairo to ease the pressure against the seawall. Last night they dynamited another hole to relieve the pressure on a setback levee near New Madrid, Mo.

Thousands of refugees who lived in the inundated area camped along the Missouri border, hoping Cairo and southeast Missouri's "boot heel" would be saved from engulfment.

PIN FAITH IN LEVEES

As 500 men labored to strengthen the levee near Mellwood, Ark., evacuation of 50,000 persons from scores of farmlands was completed. Another crew was at work repairing the levee at Hickman, Ky.

The big test of the government's billion-dollar flood control system along the Mississippi will not come until next week. While the engineers were prepared for any eventuality, Maj. Gen. Malin Craig, U. S. Army chief of staff, said qualifiedly he expected Mississippi dikes would hold. He based his belief on the expectation the levees will hold at Cairo and no abnormal floods develop in tributary rivers.

While some predictions were made that the flood crest on the Mississippi would be considerably under first expectations, Lieut. Col. Eugene Reybold, directing operations at Memphis, went ahead with plans to protect the levees against a flood of water the equivalent of 62 feet on the Cairo gauge.

TOWNS IN SODDEN RUIN

Above Cairo the only possible threat to gradual return to normalcy appeared to be the weather. Rain and snow were forecast, but it was not expected to change the situation appreciably, and Walter Moxom, the weather bureau's flood forecasting expert, said the worst of the flood in the Ohio valley had past.

A herculean task was involved in restoring the towns along the Ohio waterfront from Pittsburgh to Cairo and government agencies developed a broad rehabilitation program with provision for placing about 200,000 persons on relief rolls.

The handmaidens of disaster—hunger and disease—caused concern in many cities. Supplies of food and medicine were rushed into the area and drastic measures were considered to stop the spread of disease. Soldiers and police guarded against looting.

Louisville officialdom stood on the estimate of 200 dead made four days ago as the Kentucky metropolis struggled with wartime fervor to care for thousands of the 230,000 persons driven from their homes.

WATER SUPPLY GONE

Across the river, Jeffersonville, Ind., its 12,000 inhabitants reduced to 300, sent word it was "down but not out." The 300 survived the flood in a barricaded factory on the river front.

An alarming reduction in Cincinnati's water supply caused the daily water ration to be cut in half as the city's disaster council made plans to have 10,000 WPA workers start a cleanup, perhaps by Monday.

The National Guard remained on duty in the flood-stricken towns of southern Indiana to prevent looting and aid in rehabilitation which some said might require years.

At Huntington, W. Va., the police force was augmented by American Legion volunteers to aid law enforcement, after one man was killed by thieves seeking valuables in the flooded area. Skiffs and launches were used by patrolmen.

Flooded City Roads Cave

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 29 (AP)—Street collapses is the newest worry for this flood-battered city.

Captain Estel Hack of the police traffic bureau said today First street between Breckenridge and College and Kentucky street from Third to Fifth had caved in.

Pilot Cowan Tells of Mercy Plane Flight to Louisville

Charles S. Cowan, president and chief pilot of the Shobe Airlines, who piloted Alan C. Frazer and the Boston Evening American flood relief plane loaded with precious serum to flood-stricken Louisville, today told his own story of the flight.

By CHARLES S. COWAN

It was the most terrible thing I have ever seen.

I'll never forget the conditions in Louisville. I'll never forget the scene of hundreds of housetops and chimneys sticking out of a sea of water. It's hard to describe conditions as they are down there.

No one can realize just how things are in Louisville unless he sees them himself. I never saw anything like it in all my life.

Our flood here last spring was nothing compared to conditions in Louisville and surrounding cities and towns. I flew during our flood, carrying newspaper reporters and photographers up as far as Montreal, but it was nothing like this flood.

EVERYBODY HELPING

It's really very remarkable, too, how the people down there have entered into the spirit of the thing. Each one is trying to help the other. All over the city of Louisville people can be seen aiding refugees.

Because of lack of quarters in Louisville, I slept in Dayton, flying there from Bowman Field. I left there at 10:15 yesterday morning and after making stops in Cleveland and Buffalo, I arrived here at 5:15.

The trip back was all right, but going down we ran into heavy wind, and snow between Syracuse and Cleveland. It cut down our visibility. We landed at Louisville a little after 8 p. m. Tuesday.

On the way down, we flew over the flooded area. What a sight. There were whole towns right in the middle of a river. It seemed as if nobody could ever live there again—there was nothing but roof tops and chimneys looking up at us.

INTO CITY BY BOATS

Louisville was the worst of any place. After stopping at the Rugby school, the headquarters for hospital supplies, we went to the water's edge by car, and then into the center of the city in an outboard motorboat.

We were on our way to the Brown hotel, where Dr. Arthur T. McCormick, State health commissioner, had his headquarters. We walked several blocks. Then went farther in an army truck. We walked again, but through back alleys, along fences, jumping over fences until we got there.

Later we drove in an army truck by many of the flooded houses. It was a pitiful scene to see dozens of children looking out of the windows.

Before I left I learned that the only approach into Paducah was by amphibian and that food and serum were being dropped there by parachute.

"The response to my ad in the Boston American was very fine. I rented my four room apartment to a very nice family. I will certainly use the American again whenever I have a vacancy," says Mrs. H. Gallagher of Roxbury.

CAIRO LEVEE BUILDERS WAIT CRUCIAL FLOOD TEST

Cairo, Ill., Jan. 29 (INS)—Cairo's army of 4000 exhausted levee workers sat back on its heels today and dared the rapacious Ohio to do its worst.

The work of raising up the 60-foot dike protecting the city, to a height of 61 feet in preparation for the 61-foot flood crest expected tomorrow or Sunday, has been completed after a week of increasing toil.

Now there is nothing more to do but wait and see whether Cairo belongs to its citizens or to the river.

The river is slowly inching its way upward as the crest creeps southward from the upper Ohio valley. Today the water had passed the 58.1-foot mark.

LEVEES DYNAMITED

The danger of an overflow of the waters diverted into the huge Bird's Point-New Madrid floodway—a measure which saved Cairo from inundation early in the week—passed today with the dynamiting of eastern levees at the lower end of the Great lake, allowing the impounded waters to flow back into the Mississippi channel.

The army of levee workers, city officials, relief workers and even women who stayed to cook for them are the only inhabitants of Cairo now cut off from the outside world by rail and with the only means of egress a single highway to the north. More than 8000 of Cairo's residents have been evacuated.

Above and below Cairo dozens of towns and settlements have been swept by the flood waters.

COAST GUARDSMEN AID

U. S. Coast guardsmen are finishing up the evacuation of Mound City and Mounds, Ill., a half dozen miles away.

On the dirt levee separating the river from the high water of the town were motley scenes. There were little knots of men, standing in yellow mud by their belongings, household effects, mules, cows, horses, donkeys, cats, dogs, birds, and what not, to be loaded on ship or barge.

To Arkansas, rivers and overflow waters were reported slowly receding in the upper reaches, but the lowlands will be flooded for weeks, and the ten cities are prepared for a protracted seige.

WORK AT WEAK POINTS

The combat forces, the engineers, concentrated their forces at three critical points along the levee system—a section of the levee four miles below Hickman, Ky., which if it went out would isolate Tiptonville, Tenn., and flood the Reelfoot lake sector.

The setback levees at the Bird's Point-New Madrid floodway which if they gave way would inundate a great portion of southeast Missouri and southeast and east Arkansas and the weakened levee at Mellwood, Ark.

Memphis was a great clearing house for thousands of refugees today. Red Cross authorities planned to ship 7000 out of Memphis today to make way for the additional thousands constantly streaming into the city.

What Flood Words Mean

A revetment usually is a rock, masonry or concrete-slab facing, along the sides of a troublesome stream to protect the banks from washing away.

A levee is a permanent embankment, often of earth, to prevent overflows.

A dike is similar, but is usually an emergency structure, often built of sand bags or an overflow threatens.

A spillway is a passageway for the release of excess water; also, the top of a dam over which water may escape, without washing the dam away with it.

A floodgate is a sliding section of a dam which may be opened to release water.

A floodway is a section of land near a stream into which flood waters may be diverted deliberately to lessen the danger in other areas. The opening is a bise plug.

Army of 100,000 Workers Rush Work on Levees

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 29 (INS)—Mobilization of man power along the Mississippi River, with Memphis the focal point, continued today under federal supervision as a pick and shovel army 100,000 strong accepted the challenge of the river and confidently prepared to beat it back all along the 1200-mile main levee front from Cairo to New Orleans.

Although Government meteorologists brought cheering news to the lower valley with their figures of crests under those predicted by army engineers, there was no stop in preparations—mean crest of the crushing of a million inhabitants of the lowlands.

RECORD STAGE PREDICTED

Government meteorologist F. W. Brist predicted a crest here of 48 feet within 10 days.

But Lieut.-Col. Eugene Reybold, district engineer, did not alter his prediction of a crest of 55 feet, and pushed work on reinforcement of the levees. The river passed the 46.6 foot mark last night, within one foot of the all-time record.

So. Indiana Flood Falls; Disease Menace Grows

Evansville, Ind., Jan. 29 (AP)—Leaving unparalleled ruin behind, the Ohio river quieted down along most of southern Indiana's flood-scarred waterfront today.

Crest of the bloated stream gradually passed this city and moved into Posey county. Engineer river experts forecast the crest would reach Mt. Vernon tomorrow and travel into Illinois.

TREMENDOUS DAMAGE

Indiana, victims of the worst flood in the state's history were glad to see the turbid water go. The Ohio river has caused incalculable damage to southern Indiana for towns in less than two weeks, Reber spokesmen admitted years might be required for rehabilitation.

On duty in Indiana's stricken area today were 4000 National Guardsmen to prevent looting and aid in rehabilitation. Adjutant-General Elmer F. Straub said the troops would continue to patrol the area until the need for martial law had passed.

Jeffersonville, across the river from Louisville, Ky., appeared to be one of the hardest hit communities. The National Guard ordered complete evacuation of the one-time city of 12,000 persons to forestall spread of disease.

All told, approximately 25,000 persons have been made homeless near here by the destructive flood. Hundreds of homes have been ruined. Business buildings and industrial plants have been destroyed. Those structures still standing must be remodeled.

Filth and muck has covered everything. Thousands of farm animals have drowned, and their decomposed bodies have become a menace to health.

Up the river conditions generally were reported as improved. The Ohio river at Lawrenceburg, now a ghost town, has fallen steadily although most of the community is still under water. Numerous homes have floated away from the nearby town of Aurora, but the river receded gradually.

At New Albany, near Jeffersonville, hundreds of homes have been torn from foundations and carried downstream. More than 12,000 persons had fled northward.

Japan Volcanoes Threaten Eruption

Tokyo, Jan. 29 (AP)—Seismologists expressed fear today the Kirishima volcanic chain, one of the largest in Japan, may be on the verge of eruption after a long period of quiet.

Brookline Historical Society Puzzled by Old Photos

By BETTY ALDEN

GUESSING GAMES are always fun . . . especially those like the Family Album which appears occasionally on this page . . . in which one studies the pictures and tries to guess their identity, in spite of the fact that the photos were made years ago when styles of clothing and headdress were considerably different.

Identifying the family album type of thing is easy according to the members of the Brookline Historical Society . . . for the pictures are only of people . . . and though age and styles change, etc., men and women still retain the same features and that subtle something known as a "likeness" can be detected by those who know them . . .

PEGGY WOODWORTH

But identifying old pictures of buildings and houses taken some 50 odd years ago, is much more difficult . . . for many of the structures have been modernized, reconstructed or completely torn down and replaced by buildings which entirely alter the appearance of the scene . . .

Mrs. Bertram K. Little, a very active member of the Brookline Historical Society, and Miss Louisa Hooper, its librarian, have been playing this latter sort of guessing game with the collection of photos and prints accumulated by the late Edward W. Baker, formerly town clerk of Brookline, after his many years of snapshooting around the town . . .

Mrs. Baker left the collection to the Brookline Library and because of their knowledge of the town's history and landmarks, Mrs. Little and Miss Hooper have been trying to identify the pictures for some time . . . a few of the subjects are people in old-fashioned get ups . . . but most of them depict old homes and buildings . . .

Quite a few of the pictures, however, seem unfamiliar even to the expert eyes of Mrs. Little and Miss Hooper . . . so they have decided to admit all the members of the society to the guessing game, hoping in this way they will be able to identify all the pictures and have them as a complete reference file in the Brookline library . . .

Members of the society are anticipating an amusing and enjoyable program this evening as the pictures are projected on a large screen . . . and after Mrs. Little has commented upon the ones she has identified . . . telling something of the history and background of the various landmarks depicted . . . there will be an open discussion as to who, what and where the unknown subjects are . . .

Society to Elect Officers Tonight

THIS EVENING'S GET-TOGETHER, which takes place in the Edward Devotion House on Harvard street, Brookline, is also the annual meeting of the society . . . for the election of officers for the coming year . . .

And contrary to most political elections it is expected that the same officers will be re-elected to govern the affairs of the society for another year . . .

Dr. Francis P. Denny serves as president of the society . . . and the other officers include Bertram K. Little, secretary; Albert P. Briggs, treasurer, and Miss Harriet A. Cummings, vice-president. Members of the board are Luther Merrill, Miss Hooper, Francis Driscoll and Daniel G. Lacy . . .

Some of the prominent members who are anticipating this evening's meeting are Miss Laura Leigle, Mrs. Henry H. Richardson, Mrs. Ernest Rueter of Clude street, Dr. and Mrs. Wright of the old Goddard estate and Mrs. Francis P. Denny . . .

The object of the society is to study and keep alive an interest in Brookline's old landmarks and historical spots . . .

Community Fund Luncheons Informal Affairs

HERE AND THERE with Beacon Hillbillies . . . The Community fund report luncheon at the Boston City Club (Ladies' entrance, according to the invitations) are the height of fun and informality, despite the serious purpose behind them . . . and the keynote of informality is set by the white clad debs and post debs, who carry red and white checked waste paper baskets around to the tables inviting the guests to ante up the amount of money they would ordinarily spend on their luncheon . . . Stern business men are easily cajoled by the pretty solicitors into pretending they usually spend a dollar or more for the "coffee and——" which they bolt at noontime . . .

Molly Wheeler is one of the local society girls who deserted her home town for a season in New York . . . and when she isn't attending her painting classes she put in some very domestic hours managing the apartment which she shares with two friends from Portland and a Cutler girl from Hartford, Ct. . . . Molly came out several years ago and has been one of the Vincent Club's leading stars in the past two or three revues . . .

Peggy Woodworth also has an apartment in New York . . . she just became engaged to Stuart Scott, Jr., of New York and is learning how to be a good housekeeper and manager for the new home she hopes to establish in the near future . . . Peggy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Vernon Woodworth, have rented their Beacon Hill apartment for the next three months and are making their headquarters at North Pembroke, where they have a summer estate . . .

Chatty Notes of Society

MISS ANNE TENBROECK of Quincy, who will be the maid of honor at the wedding of Joan Sears and William Withington Gallagher, Jr., tomorrow afternoon, gave a miscellaneous shower and tea for the bride-to-be at the Quincy Neighborhood House, last Monday afternoon.

This evening, Robert Harmon Kennett, of Conway, New Hampshire, is giving a dinner for the bridal party at the Hotel Lafayette. The ushers at the wedding will be Mr. Kennett, Edward Tenney of Bridgeport, Conn., Charles Theodore Gallagher of Wellesley Hills, and H. Alan Gregg, Jr., of Nashua, N. H.

DR. AND MRS. CHRISTOPHER DUNCAN, JR., (Virginia Costello) of Boston, are expected to return home next Monday from a trip to Bermuda.

BRATTLE HALL Dance on Her List Tonight

Andrew Snow Photo

THE SENIOR BRATTLE HALL DANCE at the Continental Hotel, Cambridge, is the leading social event for the younger set this evening, and one of the Cambridge girls who is sure to be there is Louisa Beane, daughter of Mrs. Arthur Beane, of Fresh Pond parkway. Miss Beane has been invited to one of the numerous dinner parties which Cambridge hostesses are giving before the dance.

Hostesses At Dinner

A number of hostesses will preside at dinner parties this evening before taking their guests on to the senior Brattle Hall dance which will be held at the Hotel Continental.

Mrs. George Lincoln Dow of Brattle street is giving a dinner in honor of her post-debutante daughter, Dorothy. Miss Ann Chafee, post-debutante daughter of Professor and Mrs. Zachariah Chafee of Elmwood avenue in Cambridge, has invited a small group of her friends to dine at her home. In the group are Sally Clark, Daisy Pickman, Robert Murphy, Frank Hatfield, John Ladd and Edward Ladd.

Mrs. Howard M. Turner is entertaining for her daughters, Frances and Margaret Turner. Among their guests will be Miss Suzette Watson, who has come on from Bryn Mawr, Pa., Miss Eleanor Shaw, Preston Fraser, Walter Phillips and B. Preston Schoyer of New Haven, Conn., a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Turner.

Old Dances On Program

Henry Ford, whose hobby is old-fashioned dancing, would be right at home in the assembly hall of the Girls' Latin School this evening, for the Boston branch of the English Folk Dance Society is holding a country dance party. This party is one of seven given each year by the society, which is a branch of the English Folk Dance Society in London.

"The Running Set," a folk dance from the Appalachian Mountains, will be the feature of this evening's program of dances.

Officers of this society, which is 21 years old, are Mrs. James J. Storrow, president; James Garfield, vice-president; Miss Anna A. Kluse, secretary; Miss Martha W. Willett, treasurer, and Mrs. Richard K. Conant, director.

MRS. JAMES R. CARTER, 2ND, Mrs. Richard B. Hobart, Mrs. Francis G. Shaw, Mrs. Albert Bigelow, Mrs. William Faversham, Jr., and Mrs. J. J. Dellinger Barney will act as hostess at the private viewing of the exhibition of paintings by Paula Elisaoph at the Bell and Fletcher galleries next Monday afternoon. Sherry will be served in place of the usual tea.

Junior Aid Society Makes Merry at Dance

Junior Aid Society took the Hotel Statler by storm last evening. Sweet charity was the cause and from the time the group of young people made its appearance until the wee small hours the main dining room was the scene of much laughter and fun.

Prominent in the group of young people was Dorothy O'Connor, whose pink satin frock was most attractive and Kay Walsh who was lovely and very chic in black and white costume.

Another jolly party spending the night dining and dancing, included the good-looking Trundy sisters, Natalie and Beverly. Natalie was more distinctive in her black crepe frock appliqued in rhinestone figures with gardenias in her hair adding a chic touch to the costume. Beverly, a tall, slim brunette, chose a gown of orange sipper satin.

Also in their party were Margaret Connery, smart in a printed satin gown and Rose Meagher, whose black crepe beaded in silver was very effective with her short blonde coiffure.

Evelyn Boyle wore a tunic frock of aqua blue lace, and Geraldine Ferris, who was charge of the club's exchequer, chose a blue satin gown with trailing scarf of dubonnet chiffon.

Glimpsed Edna Purcell, an orchid in her hair leading an individual touch to her black and gold costume; Patricia Lyons, whose royal blue gown sported a clever capelet of sequins; Kay Sheerin, whose gown of black mousseline de soie had a large border of white, and Marion Connelly's black faille frock was edged with a fluffy ruching of black and silver.

Newman Club Plans Snow Party

Snow week-end party of the Newman Alumni Club has all the earmarks of a good party. Valentine Day has been set as the date of the very outdoor affair which takes the college set north into New Hampshire bills for two days of winter sports.

Pemigewasset Hotel in Plymouth, N. H., will be the headquarters for the party. At an informal snow dance on Saturday night the group will crown its snow queen. Final arrangements and reservations for the week-end may be made at the Sunday afternoon meeting at Huyler's.

Tom Furlong of Beachmont, alumnus of Boston University, is chairman of the event. He is assisted by a large committee, including Daniel J. Daly, Jr., of Dorchester, Katherine Sutton of Belmont, James Houghton of Everett, Martha O'Toole of Winthrop, Kathleen Deery of Jamaica Plain, Lucille Keating of Wellesley, Ralph Ditano of Brighton and Eleanor Freeley of Dorchester.

"To listen well you must have at least a vague idea of what the other fellow is talking about (unless you're really clever)," says Marjorie Hills in her best seller, "Live Alone and Like It," beginning in the next Sunday Advertiser.

Ace of Clubs to Conduct Supper Dance

FROM EVERY INDICATION, the Ace of Clubs' supper dance will be the top-notcher of the season. Only one week remains to make reservations for the soiree which is slated for next Friday evening in the main ballroom of the Hotel Somerset.

Names, subscription fees and programs were the subject of much discussion at the luncheon yesterday which Mrs. William B. Burke of Hingham gave at the Lafayette yesterday for the members of her patronesses committee. For her role of the day's hostess she was attractively gowned in a Mexican print belted in gold.

Seated at her right was Mrs. Joseph Hargedon, whose black crepe was banded in red stitching. She shared luncheon chit-chat with Mrs. Willis Downey, very youthful-looking in a puffed sleeve frock of bright print and Mrs. Andrew J. Porter of Belmont, who wore a black beret with her dark taffeta.

Mrs. Charles E. Donovan of Swampscott, who is general chairman of the supper dance, offered many valuable suggestions at the gathering.

Also grouped about the luncheon table were Mary Field of Salem, president of the Boston Chapter of Trinity College alumnae, who wore a brown crepe frock with her mink coat, and Mrs. Edward J. Butler and Mrs. William McCarthy. The former was smart in Gray kidskin and matching turban and the latter used pearls with her high-necked frock of black wool.

Mrs. Frederic W. Sheehan of Quincy, president of the club, arrived a bit late, her black crepe topped with caracul coat. Other guests included Helen Leary, attractively gowned in navy print; Marion Lyons in a tricky ensemble of gray wool and kidskin, and Miss Dorothy Woodbury chose a costume of brown crepe to wear with her mink coat.

Club Sponsors Silver Lecture

Many members are planning to bring guests to the meeting of the club Monday afternoon at the Hotel Somerset at which Professor Frederic Robinson of the department of fine arts of Harvard University will present an illustrated lecture on "Colonial Silver and Its Makers."

Mrs. Frederic W. Sheehan, president of the club, will be in charge of the meeting, which will be followed by a brief business meeting at which the dance committee will make reports.

Later tea will be served by Mrs. James F. Collins, Mrs. Willis B. Downey, Mrs. John J. Dunphy and Miss Isabel MacDonald.

Other members of the club who will assist are Elinor Crosby, Catherine Cronin, Virginia Marnin, Dolly Quiney, Dorothy Woodbury and Mary Young.

Celeste Callaghan is director of the play which the Sacred Heart Country Day School will present on February 9.

Legion Auxiliary To Conduct Tea

To honor state and Suffolk county officers of the American Legion Auxiliary, the Joyce Kilmer Unit is receiving at a candlelight tea Sunday afternoon in Curry Hall in the Pierce building, Copley square.

Hostesses for the tea are Lula Donovan, president of the unit; Mrs. John L. Mayer, Mrs. John Falvey and Mrs. John Doyle.

Outstanding members of the Legion auxiliary are serving as assistants at the tea. Mrs. Francis O'Brien heads the group, assisted by Mrs. Frederick J. Gillis, Mrs. Thomas J. Giblin and Mrs. Thomas Carven.

Chairman of the reception committee, Mrs. John J. Doyle, will be assisted by Loretta Garrity, Margaret Learson, Mrs. William E. Looney, Mrs. Dennis G. Haley.

"These are the times that try men's souls. The summer soldier and the sunshine patriot will, in this crisis, shrink from the service of their country; but he that stands by it now, deserves the love and thanks of man and woman. Tyranny, like hell, is not easily conquered; yet we have this consolation with us, that the harder the conflict, the more glorious the triumph. What we obtain too cheap we esteem too lightly; it is dearness only that gives everything its value."

What, no beer? It happened in a Washington street restaurant. A tall gentleman, slightly inebriated, but not too noticeably so, rushed up to the soda fountain.

With much concern in his voice he gasped:

"Quick, a glass of soda water.

"A woman has fainted outside."

The soda clerk dropped everything and responded with the glass of soda water.

The man made a quick exit. Rushed down Pie Alley where his pal was waiting for him. Whereupon pal extricated a quart from his hip pocket and the two enjoyed a mid-afternoon Scotch and soda.

Said gentleman duly returned the empty glass.

An anxious clerk queried:

"Is she all right?"

"Oh, yes," the gent responded, casually like.

LETTERS: With the permission of Irving Hoffman and Bennett Cerf, the following exchange of correspondence is re-printed herewith . . . Hoffman is the New York American columnist and Cerf is the boss of the publishing firm known as Random House . . . Recently, Cerf published Thackeray's "The History of Henry Esmond, Esq." as a feature of a Random House series known as "The Classics of the Modern Library" . . . A firm of Hollywood agents wrote as follows: "Mr. William Makepeace Thackeray, Modern Library, Random House, New York. Dear Mr. Thackeray, We have read your recent book, 'The History of Henry Esmond, Esq.,' and believe it possesses material adaptable for motion pictures . . . We are recognized agents for writers et al of both your personal services and your literary products . . .

GEORGE HOLLAND

"In the event that you have already made a commitment to some agent for the above book, we nevertheless are impressed with your potential possibilities as a screen writer and would be interested in both your services and future stories . . . Would appreciate your advising us by return mail whether or not you are represented here in Hollywood . . . in the event you are not and would desire us to represent you, we would be happy to forward you a copy of our agency agreement with writers for your information and guidance . . . Cordially yours, etc.

Cerf, moved by his sense of humor, took his typewriter in hand and answered the Hollywood agent, signing Thackeray's name.

"Thank you for your letter telling me that you believe in my recent book, 'The History of Henry Esmond, Esq.,' and that you think it possesses material adaptable for motion pictures . . . This effort is a rather crude attempt . . . but I am now working on a new novel which I think will be a natural for pictures . . . I am thinking of calling the book 'Vanity Fair' . . . I will be interested in learning what you think of the title . . . Sincerely yours . . ."

"Acknowledging receipt of your letter, in reply to our previous communication, we feel that the title you are thinking of giving your new book, namely, 'Vanity Fair,' is a good one . . . We would greatly appreciate a manuscript on the story.

"We would like to submit this, if we are authorized to do so by you, to the studios for their consideration . . ."

Mr. Coakley Replies:

And from Executive Councillor Daniel H. Coakley comes this:

"Dear George: When I picked up the American last night and turned to your column to find out what was going on in the world, I got a shock . . . I found that you had actually published something just as I had written it, so there would be no possibility of a misquotation . . . Attaboy! . . . It almost seemed like the old days, when newspapermen were newspapermen . . .

". . . me whether Governor Murphy of . . . was a 'black Republican', or one who, . . . was 'nearly as good as a Democrat' . . .

"No Murphy or Hurley, whom I have ever met, was ever a 'black Republican,' and those who know Murphy say he's 100 per cent . . .

"And, now, dear George, as to the other query—Governor Hurley and I are getting along like suckling doves . . . The newspaper boys, however after they say I am 'attacking him' and that he 'welcomes my opposition,' cannot affect the solidity of our platform . . . We're both grown up . . . Now, George—tell me, if you will, how do you make peace with somebody with whom you've never had a fight? Cordially, Dan Coakley" . . .

"Gold Diggers" On Two Bills

Arliss-Henie Bill at Twin Houses

As lively a daily-double as you'll find in a town's movie house tour is yours for the price of a ticket to the Paramount or Fenway, where George Arliss in "Man of Affairs" and Sonja Henie, in "One in a Million," are the attractions.

Arliss, in topper and monocle is at his best and is most suave in this story . . .

Arliss plays a dual role in "Man of Affairs" . . . as Lord Dunchester . . . secretary of foreign affairs as well as his twin brother, the roving Richard, who's got an eye for romance as well as a mind for philosophy.

A young Englishman is accused of murdering Emir Abdullah and Arliss escorts him back to England. All the color and mystery of the Far East is reflected on the screen in the scenes preceding the English . . . departure for their homeland.

Arliss is splendid and in his encounters with the turbanned sheiks, in which they demand rich concessions, he matches them in inscrutability and suavity.

In quite a different . . .

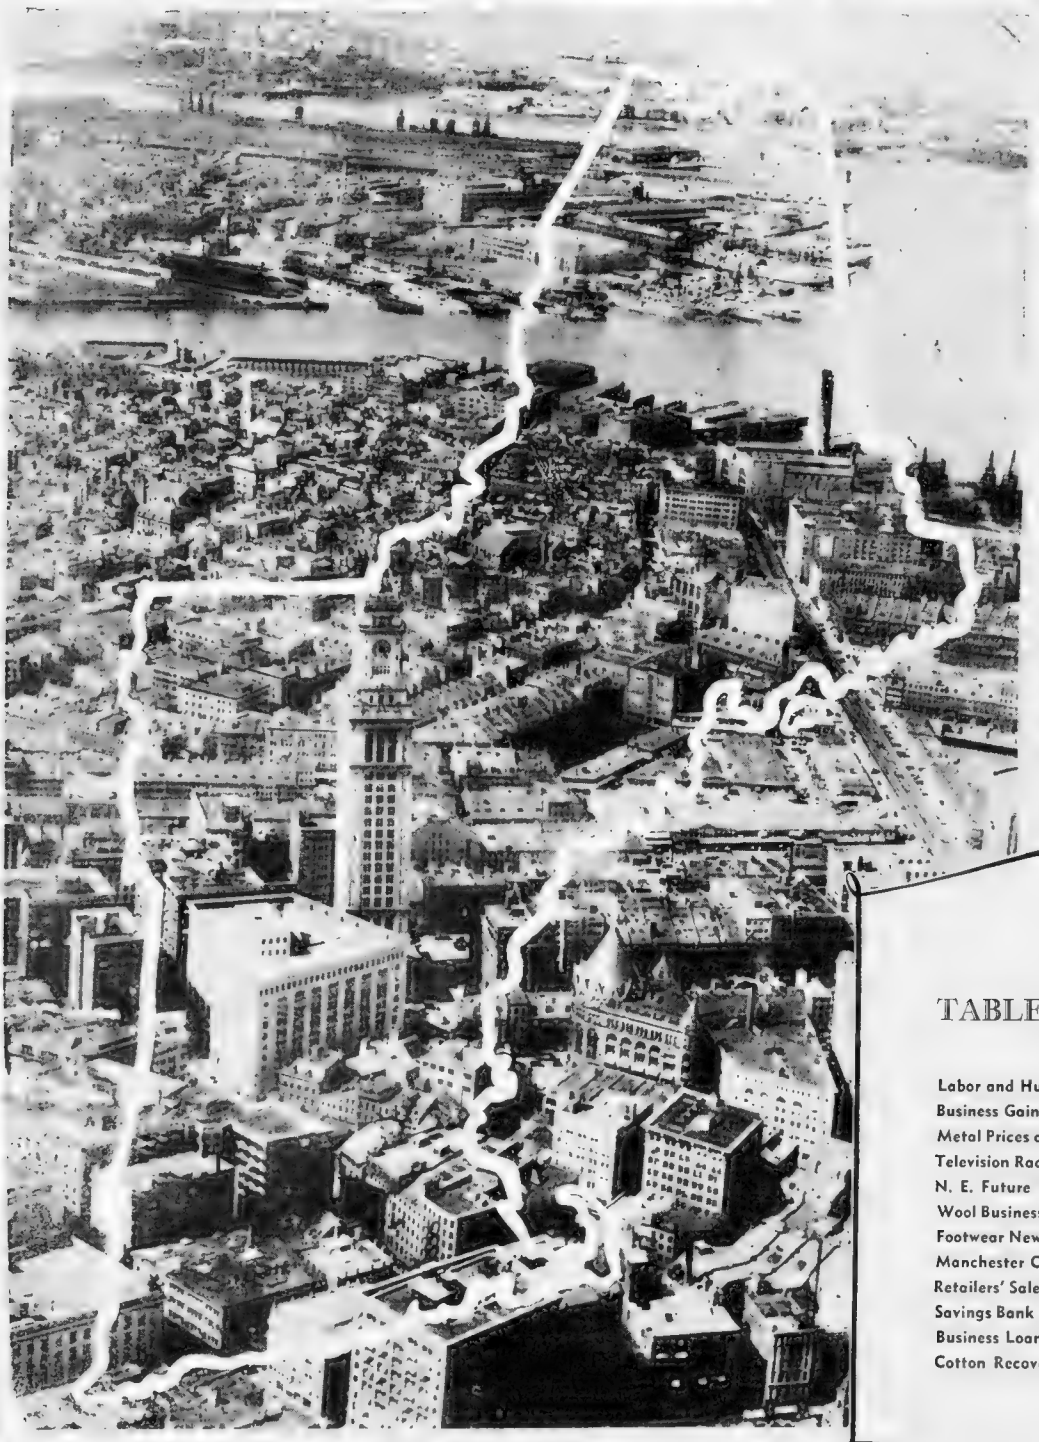
ANNUAL INDUSTRIAL AND FINANCIAL REVIEW



Spreading from the Custom House tower are the myriad business and financial activities that make Boston the fourth largest market in America. Boston is the nearest port to Europe and second of all U. S. ports in the volume of imports; center of the country's paper trade; largest wool center in America; world's largest center and market of the allied shoe and leather industry; trading center of one of the richest industrial areas in the world and, because of its strategic position, the focal point of New England progress and prosperity with which 3,166,341 people are vitally concerned

A Story of Courage

A City Fights Its Way to Victory

By ARTHUR E. MOREAU

President Amoskeag Industries, Inc., Manchester, N. H.

NEW Hampshire's fierce tiger, apparent economic oblivion for Manchester, bared its fangs and turned out to be a tame pussycat

Last a year ago now, talk of grass growing in streets was more common in this largest New Hampshire city than any other subject. The great Amoskeag Manufacturing Company, greatest cotton textile plant in the world, had gone into bankruptcy and liquidation was ordered.

Yet during the past 12 months Manchester staged one of the most remarkable manifestations of community courage and enterprise ever seen on the constantly amazing American industrial scene.

While clouds of discouragement and doubt were hovering over the heads of the populace of the Queen City of the Merrimack, a small but determined group of far seeing, alert merchants and businessmen were [illegible] plans [illegible] that shook the East for its setting.

With but a week's time left before the mills were to go under the auctioneer's hammer, this group formed a new company, Amoskeag Industries, Incorporated. Its purpose was to save a tremendous manufacturing establishment for Manchester's future.

In four hours time, Elm street, the city's leading business thoroughfare, was canvassed and subscriptions for over a half million dollars were secured, more than enough to cover the 10 per cent cash deposit needed for their bid to the liquidation trustees for $5,000,000 for all assets of the now defunct Amoskeag Manufacturing Company.

And within the 30 days allowed by Master in Bankruptcy Arthur H. Black, the additional $4,500,000 to complete the purchase was raised by virtue of a sale to the Public Service Company of New Hampshire of the Amoskeag hydro-electric plant, the canal, turbine and water rights for $2,250,000 and a loan from Manchester's seven banks, which co-operated in this with the same progressiveness as in all civic enterprises.

Thus the first step in taming the tiger was taken—public sale and auction of the mile and a half long property, meaning virtual scrapping of this tremendous industrial property, was stopped.

And here's what we found we had bought: 75 buildings, including some of the most modern manufacturing property in the East; 21 miles of paved roads within the mill gates; seven miles of railroad tracks; a complete foundry, where Amoskeag once made a large share of its own intricate machinery; a huge machine and tool shop; a paint and carpentry shop; storage sheds; bridges; and millions of dollars worth of some of the finest textile machinery in the world! 8,000,000 square feet of floor space—2,000,000 of which has already been [illegible]

A Newspaper Editorial

from The Boston Traveler, December 5, 1936

"The Contract Must Be Kept."

Those of us whose incomes are derived entirely from our own earnings would have little chance of leaving what is even a modest estate were it not for the various forms of saving.

The forms are several and good. Particularly useful is life insurance. Again and again this newspaper has brought this fact to the attention of readers who knew it anyway.

Safely the insurance companies rode the worst depression the world has ever known. Never could this brilliant performance have been possible were it not for the care exercised in the investments made by the great companies.

The keynote of faith kept with the policyholder was well sounded by President Guy Cox, president of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company of Boston, in an address before the Association of Life Insurance Presidents at their annual meeting at New York, when he told of the thought controlling the minds of insurance men—the certain fulfillment of the contract with the policyholder.

Before leaving the topic of insurance, we would remind our friends that their federal old age security payments may be profitably added to by the purchase of annuities from an insurance company.

New England Industries build New England prosperity!

More than half of all the wages and salaries paid in New England are earned in our industries.

New England's prosperity is chiefly dependent on the success of its industries.

Is your community doing its part to provide the most favorable conditions possible for your local industries? This includes, of course, the conduct of local government with the maximum economy and efficiency, so that your industries will not be handicapped by excessive local taxation.

Find out what your local Chamber of Commerce is doing to assist your local industries and increase the industrial activity of your community. Give its efforts your personal cooperation. Let's all go forward with confidence in New England's industries.

How much longer will interest rates hold at record low levels?

Is inflation under way, and, if so, can it be checked from developing into another speculative boom?

How many unemployed remain and how rapidly can they be put back to work?

CITY FUEL CO. ANTICIPATES BANNER YEAR

For very definite reasons, City Fuel Company one of New ... fuel ... concerns, with offices at 1... Congress street, the Chamber of Commerce building, Boston, looks forward to a banner year in 1937.

"The steady progress of our business during the past two years, especially in 1936, points the way to excellent sales of all our products for the coming year," says Robert J. McKechnie, president.

"City Fuel Company is more than fifty years old. For all that we are a young and growing concern. Nothing proves this fact better than our accomplishments during the period of general depression plus the sales jump of our products within recent months."

PRICELESS ASSETS for Sale!

1. Skilled Labor
2. Adequate Floor Space
3. Modern Machinery
4. Economical Power
5. Climate and Location
6. Aggressive Community Spirit

MANUFACTURERS interested in greater production, more efficient production, and lower cost production, should look toward Manchester, New Hampshire, and the tremendous manufacturing facilities offered by Amoskeag Industries, Incorporated, owners of the former Amoskeag Mills.

Already more than one quarter of the over 8,000,000 square feet of floor space, comprising 75 buildings, has been sold or leased. Yet, there is still a great opportunity for alert manufacturers to capitalize on buying or leasing sufficient space or machinery for their present or future demands.

And, with this comes these priceless assets: skilled labor; adequate floor space for any purpose; modern machinery; abundant, economical power; and the most enterprising community spirit ever exhibited in New England combined with a healthful climate in the midst of some of the nation's finest countryside!

THE TIFFANY OF THE INDUSTRY

Berwind's New River Coal

Because of its outstanding quality, Berwind's New River Coal is known as the Tiffany of the Industry. Time and again in competitive tests it has surpassed the severest engineering standards for use in power plants, office buildings, apartment houses, greenhouses, public and private institutions.

Berwind's New River Coal is distributed in this territory by City Fuel Company, one of New England's oldest and largest fuel concerns and an affiliate of The Berwind-White Coal Mining Company. Thus Berwind's New River Coal is delivered from the mine to your storage space by one organization. Quality is therefore controlled throughout.

System Doubles In Three Years

In three years the people of Massachusetts have more than doubled their annual expenditure for the building of new one-family and two-family homes.

SUMMARY OF 9 POINTS

IMPROVEMENT SHOWN

"Third: "Practically every co-operative bank in the State has

SAVING FROM INCOME

I felt frankly ad the co-operative banks helped a real revival in personal and family thrift and saving on the part of our people.

Ninth: A very significant trend public interest in thrift and home ownership is the growth and interest in response this matter to our co-operative banks, as in newspapers and other media as compared with pre-1929 or similar advertising last seen.

All in all, 1936 was a sound constructive year and certainly the signals, as far as one can see, show a clear track ahead for new records of service to those interested in systematic saving or home buying."

Cotton Recovery

'36 Business Rush Carries Into '37

New York, Jan. 29—The record of recovery in the manufacturing division stands forth as the brightest feature of the cotton trade's year.

Reflecting the fastest tempo of cotton manufacturing in a decade, cotton prices this year averaged almost twice those prevailing in 1932. (The price used in this chart was middling upland New York in cents per pound.)

the spinning world, although futures prices moved indecisively after reaching a top in October.

Late reactionary tendencies were attributed to upward revisions of crop estimates, pointing finally to an outturn of around 12,400,000 bales in contrast with earlier indications of a yield of little more than 11,000,000 bales.

ELECTRICITY BOOM SEEN

New York, Jan. 29—A big year for the electric light and power industry is [illegible] by C. W. Kellogg, president of the Edison Electric Institute, in a review of 1936.

He notes:

Electric output for 1936 estimated at 109,000,000,000 kilowatt hours, an increase of 13.5 per cent over 1935 and 17 per cent above the 1929 pre-depression year.

Domestic service sales of electricity increased to 15,375,000,000 kilowatt hours compared with 13,978,000,000 in 1935 and 9,773,000,000 in 1929.

Twenty thousand miles of new country distribution lines built by utility companies to serve 95,000 new rural customers and 60,000 others added to existing rural lines, bringing total farms served to more than 900,000.

Upwards of 410,000 kilowatts added to generating capacity, including 85,000 at Boulder Dam and 82,500 in Tennessee Valley.

Average rate for domestic service cut to 4.74 cents a kilowatt hour compared with 5.03 in 1935 and 6.33 in 1929.

Written Expressly for Universal Service

Washington, Jan. 29 (US)—The people of the United States have entered the new year with very encouraging prospects.

SERVICE FOR INVESTORS

[illegible] customers was never so necessary, in the opinion of W. A. Nash, head of [illegible] service. [illegible]

"We analyze the customer's holdings as a complete portfolio, group them as we feel they should be grouped and furnish an up-to-date report on each security held. This we do in writing, together with our recommendations as to what, if any, changes seem advisable. Each portfolio is handled as an individual problem, as applied to each investor's personal needs and wishes.

"Once we have analyzed an investor's portfolio, we keep a tabulated list of his holdings and the current day to day market on them. Thus we are able to watch the market trend on his individual securities.

"We also watch the current reports through the different financial services and notify him of any information that would affect any security or company in which he is interested.

"We advise him promptly of any information or market price change that we feel he should know as it comes to our attention. This constant watchfulness on our part places the investor in a position to protect his investment, both as to safety of principal and surety of income."

[illegible] merchandise, and this [illegible] true of men's shoes [illegible], president of French & [illegible], one of Boston's [illegible] of men's fine shoes [illegible] to comment on this trend.

"It is very evident to us here that thousands of men who during the depression found it necessary to buy their shoes on a price basis only, are now able to select their footwear on the basis of quality.

"Here at our factory we are finding it difficult to meet the demands from our own stores and departments located from Coast to Coast, to say nothing of the large number of men's shoe retailers whom we supply.

"Thanks to the fact that we kept our payrolls intact all through the depression, we have an organization skilled over a long period of years in making men's fine shoes. This naturally enables us to step up our production faster than we could otherwise.

"We have recently been able to give our employes in both our factory and stores substantial increases in wages because it has always been the policy of this firm to share our own prosperity with our whole organization."

An Excellent Example of Modern Highway Construction

Safety and Progress Demand Adequate Highways

The fact that improvements have been made more rapidly in motor cars than in road systems, makes it essential to inaugurate a comprehensive program of highway construction to make roads and streets safe.

Main routes should be of the divided lane design, with middle safety strips. The construction of all necessary underpasses, grade crossing eliminations, and rotary traffic circles will decrease the annual toll of highway fatalities.

Sonja's Finish to Dying Swan

With "Spot" Aid to Ending

'Girl in a Million' Pays

Tribute to Boston Ice Enthusiasts

By WALTER KILEY

Sonja Henie was some $15,000 richer for her brief Boston visit as she left town today for the President's Ball at New York's Waldorf Astoria tonight where she is to be one of the brightest of the many invited luminaries.

In her opening number Queen Sonja was adorned by a corsage ... ed her a bouquet of American beauties.

At the conclusion of her Boston appearance Sonja insisted that she had never showed before a more appreciative audience than she encountered here in Boston.

AUSTEN LAKE

Hockey's Ace Invalid

Eddie Shore Weighs

Rumor of Resignation

THE MOST DYNAMIC HOCKEY PLAYER IN the game's history reclined in the quilted comforts of his uptown apartment, inhaling cigarette smoke and nursing a purple bruise on his right hip. He wouldn't say yes and he wouldn't say no to rumors that he had reached the end of his career, but he thought he had the vitality to go on and was, as President Roosevelt would put it, fundamentally sound. He hoped to postpone the day when he would quit, but would do so at the exact instant when he finds he is no longer a great hockey player—when he is no longer Eddie Shore.

AUSTEN LAKE

He is suffering from a sensitive spot at the base of his spine and a sciatic ache in his thigh resulting from his collision with the boards last Tuesday night. But he felt fine, he said, above the waist and below the knees and believed, before a man arrived at the final stages of disintegration he should feel awful all over. So he expected to be back giving and taking his bumps within ten days, when he would see how much of his original hardihood remained and judge whether it is time to retire. But, what with the depression just ended, so many people out of jobs and himself still able bodied as far as he knew, he thought he would go on for another year or two.

SICK ROOM RUMINATIONS

HE MIGHT EVEN GO ON FOR FIVE more years. Because, when he considered such elderly hockey players as Bun Cook and Ching Johnson, his still active seniors, he rejected the sissy implication that a man of his own physical endowments could be through at 33 . . . er . . . yes, 33. Still, after 11 years of taking soul sickening shocks, it did a man good to lie flat on his back with a muscular twinge or two to keep him company and just look at the plaster ceiling or study the spirals of his cigarette smoke. It gave one time for moral stocktaking.

It was human nature ...

after all, maybe ... in Boston, he'll be ...

the Score.

HE HOPES TO MANAGE

I REMINDED SHORE THAT JUST TEN MONTHS AGO, on the evening after the Bruins' Stanley Cup collapse in Toronto, he had stood in Art Ross' suite at the Royal York Hotel and remarked that he wanted "just one more year of good hockey." He had lingered on the phrase, "just one more good year" and added, "that's all."

Yes, he said he remembered. ... 'I said good hockey,' and so far it hasn't been quite that." Maybe, he said,

FRED HOEY Writes:

AL LOPEZ RATES WITH BEST

Hello, Everybody, This Is Fred Hoey Speaking.

We haven't seen Senor Al Lopez dance the Spanish fandango, but we have seen this bundle of dynamite contribute some very flossy fielding up around the old saucer.

FRED HOEY

It is hard to estimate the value of this Spanish-American from Tampa, Fla. Al is not a robust hitter when we are mindful of .300 batters, but he generally manages to punch out a hit here and there which score runs and this is the pay-off.

If Senor Alphonse Raymond Lopez hit for "no" he would still be invaluable to Bob Quinn, Bill McKechnie and their amazing Bees.

... Lou Criger, Jimmy King, ... Clarke, ... and Mickey Cochrane, when Mike was at his best. These backstops were really marvellous in their handling of those bunts dumped around the plate. They acted like crickets. Incidentally Ray Schalk's nickname was "Cricket."

Yet old observers will tell you that Lopez compares very ...

... he has seen. So there you are fans, Al ... experts who know what it's all about.

Danny MacFayden attributes a considerable part of his 1936 success to the able assistance of Al Lopez behind the bat. Senor Al knows every batter in the league. This is a great help to pitchers.

FROZEN FACTS -:- By Bill Grimes

Just a few seasons back Eddie Shore, Howie Morenz, Bill Cook, Frank "King" Clancy, George Hainsworth, Roy Worters, Joe Primeau and "Chuck" Conacher were outstanding in the professional hockey world.

Bill Grimes

... not only an extremely painful ailment, but also ... more or less ...

Howie Morenz ...

... Frank Zeinetz and Joe Kedey in the cashes.

... Conacher, "Hap" Day, Harry Oliver, Frank Finnigan, "Hal" Cotton, Nels Stewart, Jerry Carson, "Happy" Emms and even little Aurel Joliat who can't go on forever, despite the fact that he's ...

All of the above mentioned luminaries did their share towards popularizing the fastest game on earth. It's with the deepest regrets that we watch them pass on, for they have been a credit to hockey and their loss will be felt around the circuit.

With a score of hockey's greatest ... to form a plan for selecting the players. The teams could be composed of eastern and western bred N. H. L. players. Let the fans vote as to the personnel of the All-Star aggregations, as they do in baseball.

From the proceeds of these games a fund could be established for disabled and needy players. The games could be played in the various cities of the N. H. L., starting, say, in New York and then going to Toronto, Boston, Montreal, Detroit and Chicago.

For such a worthy cause and especially if they had a say in the selection of the teams, the fans would support the offering from the oldest member to the youngest ...

And furthermore ... the opportunity to do their share for a cause which would promote ...

... whether his forte is hockey, baseball, football, tennis or golf ... There are, however, a few who allow money to slip through their fingers.

Within a period of five years, an All Star Fund would mount to more than $100,000, if the rink and club owners did their part and the entire receipts were donated to the cause. And you can care for many disabled and needy veterans with $100,000.

As I'm interested in the reaction of the All Star games proposition, I'd like to hear the rink owners ... club owners and the fans side ... which, by the way, did not originate with me—and if they go to ... been their undivided support.

Bruins

Rangers in 3rd Straight Tie

New York, Jan. 29 (INS)—The New York Rangers and the Boston Bruins battled to their third consecutive tie on ... Garden ice before 15,000 fans in Madison Square Garden. The final score was 1-1.

Alex Shibicky took a pass from Cecil Dillon near the Bruins blue line at 19.42 of the first period and drove it past Goalie Tiny Thompson for the Rangers' lone marker.

Ray Getliffe tied it up for the Bruins in 10.40 of the third period when his drive bounced ... Goalie Kerr's stick. Tiny Thompson's work in the Boston goal was superb.

French Casino Draws Society — Formal Dress Out of Style

... a farewell. Anyway ...

... Not in any minor league, however.

"Not in any minor league, however . . ." The words were hauntingly familiar, bringing memories of the 1934 World Series in Detroit when a slip of typewritten paper was handed along the press rows, opening with the sentence, "I have retired as an active ball player . . ." Babe Ruth of course. And the statement had ended, "I am open to offers as a major league manager, but not in any minor league, however."

HE TOTALS TO FINE FIGURE

WELL THE PARALLEL IS APT. Eddie Shore is the one hockey player whose career has approximated that of Mr. Baseball, though I have never heard Eddie called Mr. Hockey. Still, when he goes, his spot on the ice will remain just as empty as the cavity left by the Babe in his former line of work.

Both scrawled their copper plate signatures across every little act in their sport, whether it was the majestic arc of the Babe's bat or the human wreckage which Shore left in the wake of his rushes up the ice. Somehow the same feats performed by others never loomed so large.

In his eleven years as a Boston Bruin, Shore has exchanged more poundings than ten ordinary men receive in a lifetime of accidents, including train wreck and falling down the cellar stairs.

The number of surgical stitches taken in his skin are equivalent to what a tailor requires to sew a good overcoat. His fractures, dents, sprains and bruises would fill a small hospital's quota for a month. And withal he has stayed amiable and easy off the ice and he is sure to be out there again trying with every ounce of his energy to postpone the inevitable day when Nature taps suggestively at his joints and hurts, for the sake of his health, he remove the load from his legs.

He sums up to pretty fine figures as a man, and when he goes, we will mourn him, both as good newspaper copy and as a gent. In any case it is premature to read the burial service over his career while his legs are still under him, and I trust he stays vertical for some years yet.

The latest letter from Carroll Reed, director of the Eastern Slope Ski School, Jackson, N. STREET RAILWAY

Bay State LINE SHOWS Profit

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway vaulted into black ink figures last year with a profit of $127,601. An increase in operating income of $333,910 was the sole stimulant needed.

The final month of the year found operating income and profits slipping slightly under December, 1935 figures but the loss was not alarming. Net income amounted to $20,490 compared with $23,930 a year previous.

The first important feature of the Eastern operating statement is the small increase in expenses resulting from the jump in traffic. For all 1936 operating expenses were $4,234,682. An increase of but $12,311 over the 1935 figure of $4,228,311 which is in the vicinity of only 4 per cent of the gain in total revenues. Of the other items taxes showed a fairly large increase while depreciation and equalization were higher. Other income was off and the combination of these three offset the dip in interest charges.

One of the more interesting studies of the bond market seen by the writer is that supplied by J. S. Bache & Company. It deals with the defaulted bonds of railroads. In particular those rails that showed good earnings recovery during 1936. The analysis notes that the marked improvement came late in the year and suggests that the upward trend of revenues is still in progress. Although there are still many uncertainties facing this type of security a major increase in earnings would probably result in further sympathetic gains in their prices. In scanning the list we note that in quite a few instances fixed charges were covered by better than 50 per cent in the first 11 months of 1936.

Notebook: General Foods is gaining favor as a stable investment issue . . . While the stock is without particular speculative appeal it does hold attraction for those interested in income and peace of mind . . . This year costs may rise but increased sales should more than offset this . . . And the bulk of profits will again undoubtedly be paid to stockholders . . . National Supply's earnings last year are said to have been the best in a long time . . . And herald the clearing of preferred dividend arrearage and initiation of a common disbursement.

The stock market acts as though it did not know whether to follow the move in the steels or just view it as a speculative uprising, destined for a short but spectacular life. Bears, flood replacements and fourth quarter earnings moved the group. With the first named supplying about two-thirds of the momentum, in our opinion. As far as our position is concerned, we must be shown before we believe it is a sound move. Consequently our only advice is to use a small part of available funds in the market for the present.

Ticker Ticks: The new White Motors line of light trucks is expected to enable the company to lift production by as much as 50 per cent . . . In December Southern Pacific experienced the best times since 1928 . . . That is for the month alone . . . The shipping strike on the west coast plus receipt of $1,900,000 for services rendered the Pacific Fruit Express contributed importantly to the 60 per cent gain over December, 1935 . . . London operators, hedging against long Americans, were caught short of steels generally and U. S. Steel in particular, according to cables.

Chile Copper Company declared a dividend of 25 cents, payable February 27 to stock of record February 8. A similar amount was paid November 21.

STOCKS In Late RALLY

MOTORS, STEELS LEAD UPSWING

New York, Jan. 29—After shuffling around indifferently in today's early stock market proceedings, motors and steels inaugurated a late rally which stiffened most departments of the list.

While the General Motors deadlock, a new sit-down strike in the Goodrich Rubber factory and flood damages served to curb the buying appetite in the morning, the lack of selling in volume apparently stiffened the courage of speculative forces and many of the leaders pushed up fractions to 2 points near the final hour.

In the belated upward flurry the ticker tape, for the first time, fell behind floor dealings.

Bonds improved and commodities were uneven.

Prominent on the come-back were U. S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, National Steel, Ludlum, General Motors, Chrysler, Yellow Truck, Briggs Mfg., Electric Auto-Lite, International Hydro-Electric, Miami Copper, Inspiration, Santa Fe, Atlantic Coast Line, American Crystal Sugar, American Locomotive, Lone Star Cement and U. S. Industrial Alcohol.

Lower were Goodrich, Goodyear, Pullman, North American, Western Union, Warner Bros. and Paramount.

Current Factors

In their search for trading clues, boardroom customers studied the week-end business review of Dun & Bradstreet which noted a spotty condition in retail distribution due to labor upsets, high waters and weather abnormalities.

Complete absence of activity in different areas and a decline in the year's comparative in others, it was said, lowered the estimated increase in sales volumes for the country as a whole to 8 to 12 per cent over the same 1936 period.

Last week the agency estimated gains over a year ago in various sections of the country ranged from 10 to 18 per cent.

Pleasant reading was found in the Bethlehem Steel statement which came after the close Thursday and disclosed record post-depression profits for the fourth quarter and the past year.

In addition the company reported it entered 1937 with the largest total of unfilled orders on its books since the World War.

The French franc was up .00¼ of a cent at 4.66¼ cents at the beginning of foreign exchange transactions. Sterling was unchanged at $4.90.

N. E. Retail Sales Gain; Total U. S. Volume Off

New York, Jan. 29 (AP)—The course of business was indecisive this week, with both spreading floods and increased labor entanglements contributing, Dun & Bradstreet said today in its weekly review.

"Retail distribution ran a wide gamut of variations," the agency said, "with weather conditions working to its disadvantage. Wholesale markets were less active. Aside from those located in the path of rising waters, industries held close to top speed operations."

"Complete absence of activity in some areas and a decline on the year's comparative in others lowered the estimated gain in retail volume for the country as a whole to 8 to 12 per cent over the same week last year.

"The best showing was made by the New England States and the East, the increase for the former amounting to 16 to 20 per cent and for the latter to 12 to 18 per cent."

New Haven Order

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 29 (AP)—The payment of $298,000 in overdue interest by the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad was allowed today in an order signed by Judge Carroll C. Hinks of the federal court.

The payments, to be made on bonds of the Naugatuck Railroad Company, the Harlem River-Port Chester and the New Haven and Northampton Companies, are in addition to interest payments of $3,548,765.07 authorized by the court Dec. 28.

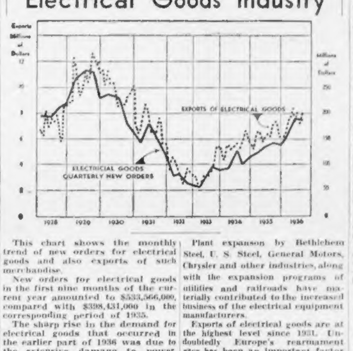
Electrical Goods Industry



This chart shows the monthly trend of new orders for electrical goods and also exports of such merchandise.

New orders for electrical goods in the first nine months of the current year amounted to $533,566,000, compared with $398,431,000 in the corresponding period of 1935.

The sharp rise in the demand for electrical goods that occurred in the earlier part of 1936 was due to the extensive damage to power, telephone and transmission lines by the floods.

Plant expansion by Bethlehem Steel, U. S. Steel, General Motors, Chrysler and other industries, along with the expansion programs of utilities and railroads have materially contributed to the increased business of the electrical equipment manufacturers.

Exports of electrical goods are at the highest level since 1931. Undoubtedly Europe's rearmament race has been an important factor in the increased shipments of electrical equipment.

NEW FACTOR

Federal MARKET Control

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

Copyright, 1937, By Universal Service

New York, Jan. 29—Hard-boiled Wall Street analysts, who make a living by seeking to appraise future probabilities, are wondering what effect the new market factor of federal control will have on the outlook for stock prices.

The question narrows down to whether the stock market will change its historic pattern in response to new activities in the direction of a managed economy.

Of course, control efforts preceded the New Deal, and dates back nearly 14 years when the federal reserve system initiated its famous open market policy for governing interest rates and the supply of credit.

One penetrating statistician suggests the possibility that the new controls by the SEC and the Federal Reserve may in the current year constitute "a moral equivalent" for a stiffening of interest rates as a means of restraining bull market enthusiasm.

CONTROLLERS' OBJECTIVE

Much of the discussion turns on whether control can be more than temporarily successful. A more immediate question is what should be the objective of the controllers. The intimation has come from the able James M. Landis, chairman of the securities and exchange commission, that the proper function of the stock market is to reflect bona fide economic changes but this has not been its historic role.

In the 50 years prior to open market technique, the stock market regularly anticipated long months in advance decisive upswings and downturns in business.

A compilation has been made which shows that in 528 months between 1881 and 1924 there were only 171 months of bull market when business was above computed statistical normal, and only 25 months of bear markets when business was below statistical normal.

Those who look back with nostalgia to the good old days think that the former system was a pretty good one. The sense of balance, it is argued, was preserved by stock market recoveries before business turned upward and by stock market reactions before it declined. In the 1931-3 period, on the other hand, there was a prolonged session of declining stock markets while business was subnormal. In that period of synchronism between business and speculation, the pessimists were in the saddle, and there was a wide public acceptance of the preachments of the crackpots.

POSSIBLE STEPS

James F. Hughes, statistician has made an inventory of the possible steps which the Washington controllers could conceivably take in 1937.

His budget of possibilities includes:

1—The Federal Reserve could increase member bank reserve requirements again.

2—It could exact the same margins from floor traders as from the public.

3—A rule could be put through permitting trading by partners in a brokerage firm on a cash basis only.

4—The three-day grace period on margins could be eliminated.

5—The SEC could require segregation of brokers and dealers.

6—The Federal Reserve could raise margin requirements again.

7—The Federal government could take steps to control foreign speculative capital.

Evidently Mr. Hughes concludes that "control" factors could hasten one or two severe intermediate reactions this year, but does not think that it would reverse the long term investment trend upward.

PAST PERFORMANCE

Obviously charts of past performance cannot tell the whole story about the market behavior. Specifically, allowance must be made for the fact that margins are substantially higher than in the past. Moreover, the capital gains tax acts as a deterrent to normal profit-taking by wealthy holders.

The open opposition in Washington to a repetition of the follies of 1929 should warn amateurs not to put themselves out on a limb in the silly expectation that the stock market has become a one-way street.

United Shoe Machinery Corporation

The Directors of this Corporation have declared a special dividend of $2.50 per share on the Common capital stock, payable February 15, 1937, to stockholders of record at the close of business February 3, 1937.

LEWIS HANEY SAYS

Rewards of Capital UPHOLD LIVING Standard for Labor

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, Jan. 29—When attention is called to the danger that even labor may demand too much, the reply sometimes comes back, "what about corporation profits?"

At first glance, it may seem fair enough to argue that, since in 1936, many companies showed large gains in net earnings, there is no reason why labor should not get more.

I have tried to think the matter through from all angles and I present herewith the results of my thought.

To begin with, it should be kept in mind that the question is not one of physical possibilities, but is one of what is economically possible. It would be physically possible to give the total profits of the steel corporation to steel laborers. But what about the economic results?

The general principle that applies is this: Those payments are economically necessary which are required to induce men to carry on the necessary productive functions.

So the real question is, are capital and enterprise paid more than is necessary to induce them to function in producing steel, etc.?

By saving and investing, they have supplied the plant and equipment. By planning and skill in meeting the risks of business, they have directed the business along profitable lines.

Whatever the reason may be, the human qualities required for doing these things are not as common as the qualities required for laboring.

Therefore, those who can successfully organize and direct large business enterprises are able to demand and get large rewards.

In a way, it is like the large rewards that such persons as Will Rogers, or Jack Dempsey, or Noel Coward, or Mae West have been able to get. Many people want their services. There are few of them.

In the case of the business enterprisers, however, there is a modern direct test of efficiency: If the business does not show a profit, the enterprisers get no reward.

This brings up another point, which should be fairly conclusive.

The laborer does not and is not able to assume responsibility for the course of a business.

He, therefore, undergoes no "business risks" and none of the Worries which attend them.

To put the matter another way, labor is not required to share the losses which frequently arise in business. It is, therefore, a fair question to ask how much, if any, of the profits should labor share?

It has been several years since the Steel Corporation paid any dividends on its common stock.

The government, however, has moved to give labor even greater "security," in the shape of reserves against old age and unemployment.

The gist of the matter is that large rewards are necessary to bring forth and maintain the large amount of saving and investment and the special qualities of enterprise that modern business must have.

Without these rewards, labor would have to go back to the less productive methods and lower living standards of the past.

Finally, we have to consider the fact that a good many companies make very small profits, and some none.

This means that the larger profits made by others are usually "differentials," which are the result of greater skill in organizing and directing them.

It also means that in many cases the low-profit ("marginal") companies cannot pay any more for labor than they now do.

The companies with large profits and those with small profits are in competition. They pay similar wage rates. The low-profit companies can't pay any more. (If the high-profit companies were to pay more, the low-profit companies might be driven out of business. At least, their laborers would be discontented.)

As a matter of fact, many companies have raised wages and paid large bonuses to labor. All the larger concerns I read about seem to be anxious to give laborers more purchasing power.

I get the impression that most business men want to get rid of wage-cutters and sweatshop employers.

The only way laborers can expect to get more than labor is worth is to take on the economic functions of saving, investing and enterprise. In these fields many are called, but few are chosen. The history of co-operation (in production) and profit-sharing is not encouraging.

BUSINESS Holds Above 1936 OUTLOOK IS CLOUDED

New York, Jan. 29—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Company, of New York, says that although business activity is continuing to hold well above the levels prevailing at this time last year, the near term outlook is somewhat clouded by strikes, floods, and adverse weather conditions in certain parts of the country.

The floods along the Ohio and Mississippi rivers are unlikely to have a serious adverse effect on general industrial activity. Unlike the spring floods of last year, the Pittsburgh area has not been affected to an important degree, and the large industrial organizations in that locality have been comparatively free from damage.

While the present floods may have covered a wider area and may have caused greater aggregate property loss, the bulk of the damage was done in the less important industrial areas. Thus, serious interruptions to operation schedules of leading industries—steel, for example—is improbable.

Stand to Benefit

Although the great destruction of wealth by the floods is naturally an adverse development, many lines stand to benefit from rehabilitation work. Producers of household products, paints, building materials (including lumber), cement, and coal, road building materials, electrical utility equipment and cables will more or less benefit.

The automobile strike situation remains deadlocked, and meanwhile, General Motors is running its program of opening as many plants as possible. Reports indicate that interest in joining the C. I. O. on the part of those employees who have been prevented from getting to work by the sit-down strikes is waning.

Public sentiment, which probably will largely determine the fate of the strike, has not yet been fully crystallized, but certain indications are that the tide is running against the Lewis forces.

$2 BASIS For Texas Corp.

Texas Corporation declared a dividend of 50 cents, payable April 1 to stock of record February 15. This passes the stock on a $2 annual basis, against $1 previously.

Consolidated net earnings for Texas Corporation and subsidiaries for 1936, based on preliminary figures, will be approximately $38,000,000 or slightly more than $4 a share after all charges, including depreciation, depletion, amortization and estimated federal taxes, Chairman Hoffman stated.

B. C. FORBES SAYS:

He-Men Bred Where HEAVYWEIGHT OPERATIONS Are Involved

By B. C. FORBES

Cleveland, January 29—Have you ever noted that certain industries breed he-men?

My observation, experience, contacts have inspired particular respect for various giants of the motor, steel and other industries involving heavyweight operations.

Men who wrestle with gigantic quantities of raw materials, men who evolve huge machinery, men who swing enormous quantities of metals, seem to develop a stature, a manliness, a masterliness, radiant with virility, courage, the kind of daring we associate with pioneers.

This city has an unusual number of such men.

And I find most of them facing the future unflinchingly, optimistically, undauntedly, notwithstanding that most of them have had at least an average share of problems, setbacks, hardships during the last half-dozen years.

Despite the misfortunes which latterly befell them and, through them, many local citizens and institutions, the Van Sweringen Brothers hold a high place in most Cleveland hearts.

They contributed much to revivifying the city. They launched gigantic enterprises. They created much employment and real estate values. They are regarded as having been staunchly honest.

Incidentally, high hopes are entertained of Messrs. George A. Hall and Guy A. Tomkins, the newly backers of the Mid-America Corporation, which re-won control of the west Van Sweringen railway empire, from "Wall Street". of Herbert Fitzpatrick, brilliant legal counsel, now the active head of Mid-America and of its chief interests, of W. J. Hayden, president and of George D. Hendrie, recently elected executive vice-president of Chesapeake & Ohio, the Nickel Plate and the Pere Marquette railroads, Van Sweringen enterprises.

Another local citizen who has some very prominently to the front during the past year or two is Tom M. Girdler, head of Republic Steel. He was among the first of America's prominent industrialists to manifest faith in the nation's future—the reaction set in and he aroused enormously Republic Steel's ramifications. Says Mr. Girdler:

"New steels perfected during the last six years are enjoying constantly widening markets.

"Should residential building revive as expected, enormous demand would be experienced for steel, for heating, for air conditioning, plumbing, kitchen equipment, tableware, furniture; also for steel frames for modern houses of the fireproof type.

"The steel industry has been and is today ready to meet expanding markets. Upwards of 60,000 more employes are today on the steel industry's payroll than at the peak of 1929."

President Adrian D. Joyce, of the Glidden Company, tells me:

"Fortunately, Cleveland has been getting its manufacturing interests well diversified, and also has been attracting a number of important new industries. It is the headquarters for the paint and varnish industry. Also, for industrial rayon.

"Our city has been developed as a center for materials going into the enameling industry. Such concerns as Ferro Enamel and Harshaw Chemical have been expanding rapidly. The old Winton plant has been developed into a big Diesel engine factory by General Motors. Thompson Products Company, supplying precision pistons, valves, etc., for the airplane industry, is doing a wonderful business. One of Fisher Body's largest units is now located here. Then, Cleveland is headquarters for such automatic machinery manufacturers as Warner & Swasey and National Acme. Others catering to the automotive industry include Eaton Manufacturing and Cleveland Graphite Bronze.

"Our own community supplies tremendous quantities of lacquer and synthetic enamels for the automotive trade, and we supply pigments and varnishes for practically every industry in the city.

"All the steamship companies on the Great Lakes are enjoying unusual prosperity. The American Shipbuilding Company is doing unusually well. So are the local branches of General Electric & Westinghouse."

Soviet Russia on Trial Before Civilization

IT MUST be obvious to the most credulous of Communistically-inclined minds that the "trial" in Moscow of Karl Radek and sixteen other "conspirators" is just another attempt of Robespierre Stalin and his cronies to prove that the whole world is engaged in a conspiracy to dismember Soviet Russia.

The Moscow "trial" is not a trial at all. It is a POLITICAL LYNCHING PARTY.

No one in his sane senses believed the "confessions" of Kaminev and Zinovieff, nor the "confessions" of Radek and the sixteen others now "on trial."

THE execution of one hundred and fifty "conspirators" in 1934 after the assassination of Kirov was the first indication that the Stalin terror is threatened from WITHIN.

It was the GPU that backed Nicolaiev, the assassin of Kirov.

The proof of this "frame-up" is found in the following despatch from Moscow in the New York Times for January 24, 1935:

"TWELVE IN SECRET POLICE SENTENCED IN RUSSIA. THE COURT FOUND THAT MOST OF THESE MEN HAD FAILED TO TAKE MEASURES TO EXPOSE AND END THE ACTIVITIES OF THE 'COUNTER-REVOLUTIONARY TERRORIST GROUP' IN LENINGRAD AND OF THE ASSASSIN OF M. KIROV—LEONID NICOLAIEV—ALTHOUGH THEY WERE IN A POSITION TO DO SO."

Shortly afterward the GPU was stripped of its powers. It was never anything but a "provoking agency."

The technique was the same in the Kaminev-Zinovieff "trial." The technique is the same in the present "trial."

THIS technique is to torture men into "confessions" that they have dealing with foreign governments and to "frame" assassinations for the purpose of executing Robespierre Stalin's enemies.

It isn't Radek and his companions that are on trial.

IT IS SOVIET RUSSIA THAT IS ON TRIAL BEFORE THE EYES OF CIVILIZED MANKIND—A TRIAL IN WHICH THE DEFENSE COUNSEL IS NONE OTHER THAN THE ASSASSIN OF CIVILIZATION ITSELF!

That They May Walk

By Nelson Harding

Tonight, at Boston Garden, all New England celebrates the birthday of President Roosevelt, and, at the same time, restores to health thousands of children afflicted with infantile paralysis.

The many thousands of dollars that will be raised will finance the city's war on this dreadful malady and help support the Warm Springs Foundation, established by the President following his own recovery from the disease.

Every man and woman who can possibly afford the price of a ticket should go to Boston Garden tonight and join in the festivities. Every dancing step they take will mean a walking step for some boy or girl, now denied proper treatment.

Those who plan to attend Birthday Balls in their own communities tomorrow night should come to Boston this evening. Thus they can DOUBLY aid this most worthy cause.

So, come one, come all to the Birthday Ball. Make it the biggest, most successful event ever conducted in this section of the country.

The Boarding House

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Years ago, Belasco put on a show in which the principal set was a room in an actors' boarding house. His press agent, homing the show, sent out a piece in which he dwelt on the realism of the setting. In order to get the whole absolute type, he wrote, Mr. Belasco made a minute study of 6000 actors' bedrooms before he found out what he wanted." I remember being puzzled about anything being so typical that one had to study 6000 items to get the type.

Edwin C. Hill

There is a joker there somewhere, but at any rate there was a type, not only of the actors' boarding house, but of O. Henry's boarding house and all the others that sheltered fool-loose boys and girls, staking out their share of the American dream. The boarding house, the hall bedroom, have a place in America, and so the current news story of the "comeback" of the boarding house inclines to turn nostalgia into a feeling of permanency.

Nothing seemed so completely done for as the old-fashioned boarding house. Now there's no knowing what may happen—we may yet attain the good old five-cent cigar that Tom Marshall yearned for, the wash-tub schooner of five-cent shaun beer, the return of the gallery gods, a snappy, swashbuckled twenty-dollar suit and a fifty-cent table d'hote.

AN INSTITUTION

It isn't exactly that one wants to go out and die for his dear old hall bedroom. But, just as it was a year or so ago when papers reported that the village dressmaker was going strong again, there is a feeling that life still goes on, when anything as institutional as this is salvaged from the junk heap.

The boarding house grew and flourished in an era of change. That was when the village and farm boys and girls were getting a toe-hold in the big towns. Much of the tide of brains and genius which has built and energized the cities flowed through the big city boarding houses. There's many a big business executive, with an imposing country estate and a flock of servants, who was rationed on boarding house prunes and rump steak when he was first getting his hooks into his job and his career.

I happen to know one who loves to talk about the grubby boarding house of his New York days—how the hatchet-faced old Mrs. Spinney made him soak his feet when he had a cold and threatened to smack him if he didn't. I thought of him when I saw the headline about the second millenium of the boarding house. One wonders how Puck and Judge and such comic papers could have published at all without the boarding house. An anthology of the jokes about prunes, beans, tough steak and hash would fill a fair-sized public library.

The standing cast of characters would round out a play. On the boards, year after year, always getting a laugh, were the star boarder, the dyspeptic, the flirt, the cut-up, the dead beat, the little ingenue from the country, the duke, the mottled and libulous old major with his dream millions, the handsome and emptypated floorwalker and, of course, the hawk-eyed but ostentatiously genteel old landlady.

GARDEN OF HUMOR

Many a newspaper equib writer sent his children through college mainly on boarding house jokes, plus standard niffies about mother-in-law, tramps and Pat and Mike. For instance, every so often they used to dust this one off, give it another run and collect another two dollars:

Major Sorehead—The flies are awful thick around here.

Landlady—Why don't you go where they're thinner?

Just scrilling this quaint, Victorian joke on the typewriter is a startling reminder of the shake-up in journalistic humor within the last few years. Nothing, not even the new era which blew up in 1929, is so dead as the "he-and-she" joke. Now it is a single line, serving as the fuse to detonate the whole pedantic picture and blast out a laugh. Bergson, who wrote the most searching treatise on humor ever penned, could make much of that transition.

Vaudevillians found in the boarding house a fat source of material—not only jokes for songs, but jokes for every occasion. Any reader with a touch of frost around his ears will remember this one.

"My, how the boarders yell, when they hear that dinner bell"

Around the West Forties, back in the days of Mrs. Leslie Carter, you used to hear a lot of actors' boarding house jokes, some of them pretty grim, circulating among the thespians. There was the one about the elegant old ham actor with a fuzzy hat who knocked at the door of one of the old hospices with tall front steps and a blotchy brownstone front. The door was opened cautiously by the landady, who, in the old days, was a dreadful old harridan. The old Shakespearean swept off his hat, bowed low and said:

"My dear Madame, what are your lowest terms for actors?"

"Scoundrels and dead beats," snarled the old lady, slamming the door.

Boarding houses of today are a lot better than the old timers. Modern knowledge of diet, spreading widely among the public, is making it easier for them to survive. Thirty or 40 years ago a square meal was a mighty serious opus, with much more meat and fried food and a number of all sorts of pastry. Now people are trained to fruits and fruit juices, less starch, and generally lighter meals.

WASHINGTON LEADS

A thoroughly edible, balanced, sound, sensible meal of today calls for a whole lot less labor and expense than it used to. And the prune, victim of cruel japery for decades, now comes on the scene as chockful of vitamins, non-fattening, with a low-calory content and all other prerequisites of worth and respectability.

Washington is said to have the best boarding houses in America. The landlady is apt to have married couples or whole families for boarders. They have high living standards, steady jobs, solvency and all that makes an ideal boarder.

Old mansions instead of slumping into decay, as in other cities, find here a fresh and profitable use for their twenty or thirty rooms. And so, the capital leads the way, in this as in most institutional trends of American life.

Timilty Needs More Men

POLICE Commissioner Joseph F. Timilty and Fire Commissioner Edward F. McLaughlin have made requests that are so obviously necessary that none, not even the staunchest disciple of economy, can question their reasonableness.

Mayor Mansfield's partial approval, already obtained, is encouraging. There should be no further delay.

Commissioner Timilty asks for three hundred additional men for the Police Department.

Commissioner McLaughlin seeks seventy more men for the Fire Department.

They explain that full strength requirements would necessitate appointment of three hundred and twenty-five more patrolmen and one hundred and forty more firemen.

Yet, even though no one knows better than they the value of absolutely efficient, fully-manned departments, they make their requests conservative, entirely in line with present policies of government retrenchment.

Municipal economy is always to be desired. Departmental pruning should be encouraged.

But, nevertheless, the kind of economy that curbs the efficiency of services so vital to public safety as police and fire protection is never to be desired or encouraged.

Let Nebraska Make Test

THE Legislatures of various States are giving close attention to the unicameral experiment in Nebraska.

The unicameral idea is not entirely new in America. Several States have tried and abandoned it. Perhaps Nebraska now has the key to a new application of the principle that will be productive of benefits not attainable under the established order.

Slayer Must Be Caught

CLOSELY following the shocking murder of Charles Mattson of Tacoma, Wash., comes the discovery of another fiend slaying, quite as horrible.

It is the killing of little Chester Harris of Cambridge, whose dismembered body was found Wednesday in a shallow grave within sight of his home.

The child disappeared in late October. His twin brother, Charles, could give no clue to his whereabouts. And, though an extensive search was conducted for him, woods combed and rivers dragged, nothing of his fate was learned until the finding, by accident, of his skeleton.

Obviously, and regrettably, too much time has been allowed for the murderer to make his escape. He may be in the South or far West. He may even be in Europe.

But wherever he is, he must be found and punished.

A Mission of Mercy

A NEWSPAPER is a public institution.

As a public institution, the Boston Evening American chartered a plane, filled it with serum and medical supplies donated by the State, and dispatched it to the Louisville, Ky., flood area.

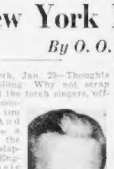
Naturally, with the timely arrival of the plane and supplies, this newspaper takes pardonable pride in the praise bestowed upon it by Governor Hurley and the thousands that realize the importance of having rushed assistance to the stricken lands.

But, still, there is an even greater satisfaction in the knowledge that this newspaper, dedicated always to the service of its State and nation, was able to conquer distance and space and bring to those so sorely distressed the help that in many cases meant life itself.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Jan. 29—Thoughts while strolling. Why not scrap the old-time torch singers, off-pitch promoters and tiny stage? And substitute a little of the lovely, lilting stuff of English music halls? Such tunes and lyrics no more are created than "The Good Old Summer Time."



O. O. McIntyre

Look-alikes: Ina Ray Hutton and Eddie Peabody. Add highly efficient private secretaries, Julia Kelly, of the Hayworth, track play habitué; Nat Dartmore. The Countess Abdy, who wears shoes without heels. And ever so often there are a few countesses who haven't ever shoes.

With long white hair and whiskers, Hendrik Van Loon would make a perchy Santa Claus. And, with a stovepipe hat and side-burns, Dudley Field Malone in the John Bull on Fourth street. Fifth avenue's best-dressed girls, Albert Morris. And does he wear tight collars!

When feather coiffures are worn, Peggy Fears will have one. Highly talented Arthurs: McKnight, Sammels, and Darr. From the Follies to Othello at the New Amsterdam. A big rap in Kim Sis until W. C. Fields gets on the job again. Grinding forth sort of name: Crosby Gaige.

Rhymes: Mae Murray is a real in a hurry. And Bill Corum is a one-man forum. All Chinks had only their hair in the middle—the "Simpson influence" by is it Lyle Fontaine's? That is shocking me over to keep a date at the Ritz. Hope he gets where's silly in a revolving door or something.

"room-hah." The new spot started off auspiciously and is going great guns. It depends wisely little on the Cuban clientele. Many of the local fast steppers have eschewed the graceful tango for the newer epilepsy. The most expert are said to be Jules Glaenzer, Erskine Gwynne and Jimmy Donohue.

Nazimova in her bleak Theatre player has gone to a personal following as definite as that of Ruth Draper, the mimic. When she appears in Linda Lisa Ghent or the like she is assured of a packed house for several weeks. It's a cultured audience, long loyal to the theater. Everybody hangs on her words. The old you-could-hear-a-pin-drop atmosphere. And at the conclusion, sans claque, the sincerest applause to be heard in the modern theater.

No man in the public eye today is more debonair than the magnificent carriage, superb stride and noble serenity of General John Pershing. He could easily go on, without makeup, as the dashing lieutenant in a romantic musical show and glitter patter the hearts of feminine first nighters. I saw him faring magnificently forth along the avenue recently. Everybody looking the other way, including the bus top riders, turned as on a pivot to watch him out of sight. And if he was not totally oblivious he is a grand actor, too.

Next to General Pershing and for his years, the late Dr. Wolff Hopper had the most commanding carriage to be seen on the highways. The Ritz's Albert Kobler is another. Everybody when he gets into the stride of his Park avenue promenade. Among the actors, William Gaxton is regarded as having an athletic physique on and off. Another of the dashing athletes is Whitney Warren, the architect.

Lucius Beebe, reportorial fashion plate, has been doing a bit of journalistic research to finish out "off your-the detestable cuff wearers in the metropolis. His rounds of the Sulkas, McCoys, Charteis and other haberdasheries struck no news of addicts to the barrel cuff.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Not getting anywhere with yourself or your life? Then stop crouching at the other fellow, and clean house where the real trouble lies—in your own attitude toward yourself. START RESPECTING YOURSELF!

Elsie Robinson

Self-respect. Sounds simple and trite, doesn't it? But it isn't. Self-respect is still our newest and most revolutionary social theory. Back and back and back through centuries of reckoning, men have been taught to fear and despise themselves—blame themselves ceaselessly.

Easy enough to see how it all started, there in the jungle darkness, out of our common ignorance and fear. Naked savages cowering, crushed by the consequences of their own blundering. Who were we? . . . Why were we? . . . What was life all about? If a man could answer these questions he might walk free.

But no man could answer them. So the wily medicine men made millions of us all—taught us that we were false, foul creatures, doomed to failure unless redeemed by suffering and shame.

INWARDLY AFRAID

And we believed them. Believe them still, in spite of our seeming confidence and conceit. Outwardly, before the watching world, we swagger, bully and boast. But inwardly we cringe, hating and dreading the unsolved mystery of ourselves, nagged by a constant sense of guilt or weakness. Often, indeed, turning our own abasement into a hideous secret indulgence—or using it as a public racket!

YOU—you who are reading this—how often are YOU glad for the gift of yourself; proud of the power in you? How often do you dare be yourself or believe in yourself?

But you've made a fool of yourself?" . . . Lied — committed countless cruel and cowardly acts? Of course you have—who hasn't? You're an ordinary mortal, aren't you? Neither genius nor genie. So it follows that such failures are bound to be part of the day's work. But what of it? All this has nothing to do with your fundamental job of RESPECTING YOURSELF.

VALUE YOURSELF

It isn't necessary to admire or approve of yourself to RESPECT YOURSELF. It isn't necessary to be proud of your record or have public acclaim. You may be—perhaps should be—furious at yourself, disgusted with yourself. You may be esteemed a public pest. Yet it is not only right but vitally important that you should RESPECT YOURSELF.

Respecting yourself has nothing to do with what you have done. It is concerned only with what you are. What are you? What are you, as you stand there alone, ashamed, discouraged — desperate? You are Life's supreme achievement! You are the most amazing, powerful and noble thing Life has ever created.

The old crippled pagan slave Epictetus put it all in one line —"You carry a god within you!" No matter how you fumble at fait, you carry something within you which is everlastingly strong and true and radiant. You know this. You have always been sure of it. You have wished, wretchedly, that others might be sure of it, too. Make them sure of it BY RESPECTING YOURSELF.

Stop your grieving and regretting! Stop trying to cover up your inner dismay with wisecracks or alibis.

PRESERVE FAITH

Face yourself and your mistakes frankly. Make what amends you can, if amends are necessary. But never, not for one second, despise yourself or permit yourself to feel like a worm!

You are NOT a worm. "You carry a God within you!" Believe in God! Enjoy that God! Respect Him! and insist that others do likewise! No matter what you have done, hold your head high—grasp life eagerly—think of yourself gratefully.

If God could take a chance on you—if He could make you His crowning achievement you should spend your days blubbering!

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

A dozen states are ravaged by floods. Fire and flood in the Cincinnati area are rated one of the "seven greatest" disasters in Red Cross history. The Ohio flood described as the worst ever known on that river. Hundreds of thousands of people are homeless. Many lives have been lost. Property damage runs high into the millions. Even in a nation which is at peace with the rest of the world, life is very much a struggle for existence.

A paradox of the flood disaster is the water famine in the flooded areas. Like the shipwrecked mariner, the people of these districts find themselves with "water, water, everywhere nor any drop to drink." A few score years ago, they drank unfiltered and unsterilized water pumped from the river and thought nothing about it. Now they are warned that all drinking water should be boiled, if they are to avoid disease and pestilence. Bacteria are more numerous now, danger of water pollution is greater, and easier living has made people soft.

From Washington, D. C., it is reported, President Roosevelt will recommend to Congress a national flood prevention program. "It is one form of national planning which is both feasible and desirable. The Federal Government is the logical agency to undertake it. And it can be handled in a way which will promote conservation and at the same time provide a large amount of relief work.

Last year, there was a terrible flood in the Ohio Valley. The one this year is worse. Knowing from experience that certain areas are certain to be submerged during periods of heavy rainfall, engineering brains of the nation should be put to work devising plans to prevent a recurrence of these floods. Large cities cannot be moved bodily from the overflow zones. Some system must be worked out to control the mighty stream flow that floods can be prevented.

Flood prevention works are about the most valuable public works the Federal Government can construct. They have the additional merit of being self liquidating. The damage already inflicted by the 1937 flood would pay for a tremendous amount of flood control work, and in some parts of the country, water stored during periods of exceptional rainfall could be used profitably to avert drouth damage during a long dry spell. We cannot regulate the action of the elements which falls but it is possible to regulate and control the movement of that water after it lands on the earth.

Prisoners in the Walla Walla, Wash., city jail tried the sit-down strike plan. Ordered out to do labor on the streets, they folded their arms and refused to leave their seats. If their supply of food and water is cut off, it won't be long until they understand that manual labor, no matter how unpleasant it may be, is preferable to being hungry and thirsty.

Soviet officials seem to regard Trotsky, an exile who now has found a refuge in Mexico, as their most dangerous enemy. But how they will miss him when he dies. Who else will they can blame him for every real and mythical plot they can dig up against Soviet rule. Until after he departs this life, they will have to find another bugaboo with which to keep the Russian people scared and stirred up. Some dictators perpetuate their rule by enrolling their people in war. Stalin of Russia holds public sentiment by continually exposing plots against the government.
